MARKET FOR CROPS FOUND UNCERTAIN

Second Release of Outlook Report Shows Much Depends on Coming Events; Wheat Crop Short

Oregon State College, Corvallis—The market outlook for Oregon crop products in 1932 depends a great deal upon the course of demand as well as upon the volume of production this year, says the O. S. C. extension service in the second and final section of outlook report just released.

The trend of business and credit conditions will have a good deal to do with the demand for farm products this year, just as farm prices have been affected by the world-wide depression during the past two years, according to the report.

Soft Wheat Crop Short: The wheat outlook is still more or less uncertain because information is lacking on the probable plantings of spring wheat in this country and in foreign countries, according to the report.

Present prospects are for a much smaller crop of winter wheat in this country than last year, and the world acreage is believed to be slightly less. As near as possible to tell, the carryover next July will again be large.

One thing of interest to Oregon wheat growers is the possibility of a comparatively short crop of soft red winter wheat in the states east of the Rocky Mountains, which might improve the domestic demand for western white wheat somewhat.

Although hay and feed grain supplies are pretty short in western states, conditions look favorable for better yields of these crops in 1932. The California winter barley crop is now very promising, whereas a very small crop was harvested last year, says the outlook report.

Weak Apple Market Possible: The apple situation in general indicates that supply will continue heavy in relation to demand in seasons favorable to apple production. Other kinds of fruits are increasing in volume, says the report, so that apples meet more competition each year.

The production of citrus fruits, especially grapefruit, is expected to continue to increase rapidly for a good many years. Planting of the Delicious variety of apples has been especially heavy in the eastern states.

With respect to the onion outlook, report says that the present high prices for onions are due to a record short crop which resulted mostly from unfavorable growing conditions for late onions in many states last year. It points out that in 1928 the late onion crop was short for similar reasons. In 1929 growers increased the acreage and good yields were obtained with the result that onion prices were very low during the 1929-30 marketing season.

Further increases in acreage were made in 1930, and prices declined to still lower levels. The report, which is available from all Oregon county agents, contains sections on various seed crops, potatoes, celery, cauliflower and other vegetables, and on cherries, peaches, prunes, hops and other crops.

BEEKEEPERS TO GET HONEY SURVEY DATA: A survey to determine cost of production of honey in Oregon, long sought by the organized beekeepers of the state, has now been started under a cooperative arrangement between Oregon State college and the U. S. department of agriculture.

The expense of the survey is met from federal funds and the field work is being carried on jointly by specialists from the new federal agricultural experiment station in California and men from the Oregon experiment station.

The purpose of the survey is to determine what methods are most efficient in reducing cost of production so as to permit producers to have a margin of profit even under present low price levels. More than 100 beekeepers will cooperate in the survey, most of them being in lower California region, the Rogue River valley, central Oregon, Columbia basin, and the Snake river region.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PARTY DRAWS LARGE CROWD: Thirty young people attended the monthly social and George Washington party of Mrs. Van Valzah's Sunday school class at her home on Friday evening. The time was spent with stunts and games. Refreshments of ice-cream and cake were served late in the evening.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT: Notice is hereby given that the undersigned administratrix of the estate of Mary I. E. Harburt, deceased, has filed in the County Court of Lane County, State of Oregon, her final account as such administratrix and that the 18th day of March, A. D., 1932, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day in the Court Room of this Court in Lane County, State of Oregon, has been fixed by this court as the time and place for hearing any objection to said report, and the consideration and settlement thereof.

BEATRICE WASSOM, Administratrix. (F 13-25-M 3-10-17)
