LESS CHICKS ON FARMS; MORE FRUIT EXPORTED

Fewer hens and chicks than usual on farms in the United States is indicated by a report on the agricultural situation just released by the Oregon agricultural extension service. The number of hens on farms on May 1 was estimated at 2 per cent less than a year previous, the smallest number in eight years.

About the same number of chicks of this year's hatching were reported in farm flocks on May 1 as a year before, but 10 per cent fewer than the 5-year average on that date. The report said that 7.6 per cent fewer chicks were hatched by commercial hatcheries during April this year than in 1931 in the whole country and that orders booked for May delivery and later were 8.3 per cent less than a year ago.

On the Pacific coast, April hatchings by commercial hatcheries ran 24.6 per cent behind last year and bookings for May and later were short 29.4 per cent. The commercial hatchery chick has fallen behind 1931 throughout the season in the western states, and is also somewhat short in the eastern part of the country. Information on the volume of farm hatchings is incomplete but some observers think that enough chicks have been produced from this source to offset in part at least the reduction in commercial chicks.

Exports of boxed apples, pears and prunes have tended to increase during recent years, says a report released by the extension service, whereas "the total volume of exports of farm products declined sharply."

Government data show that only 7.4 per cent of the farm production of the United States was exported during the 1930-31 year, compared to 10.2 per cent the previous year and 12.2 per cent in 1928-29. During the 1919-20 year our exports were 17.4 per cent of the farm production.

The products of four commodities account for 85 per cent of the farm exports from this country according to the report on the agricultural situation. These are cotton, hog products, wheat and flour and unmanufactured tobacco.

Californians Arrive - Mr. and Mrs. James Rivett of Oakland, California arrived in Springfield Sunday to visit with friends and relatives in Eugene and Springfield. Mr. Rivett is a brother of Mrs. W.
