A YOUNG MAN SPEAKS HIS MIND ABOUT ELDERS

I am eighteen years old. I have never seen a saloon in my life. I have never been inside a "speakeasy," and I don't know the address of a single bootlegger. Honestly, I am so intoxicated with life and the baseball team that I'm captain of, and my best girl, that I don't need anything stronger to pep up my jaded nerves.

But every time I pick up a newspaper, a magazine or a modern novel I find references to the "disipated, dissolute, degenerate youth of our land." I don't like to be classed in any such category—and I know a hundred fellows who feel the same way.

Just because some boys a thousand miles away break into the front page of the local daily by robbing a bank or participating in a holdup or staging a drunken riot, you old folks sit back and say, "Young America is going to the dogs!"

Just suppose we were to turn the tables on you. Yesterday I read on the front page that a pastor of a fashionable church had skipped to parts unknown with all of the congregation's money. This morning there is a story about a father who committed suicide because he couldn't tell his family that his business had crashed. Farther down there is the story of a college professor charged with exerting "insidious influence" over his students. They don't say to me, these sordid stories, that all ministers are crooks, that all fathers are moral cowards, that all youth leaders are dangerous and harmful.

If we judged you by the standards that you are judging us by, you'd be a fairly disreputable lot, wouldn't you? Ever think of the matter from that angle? Cultivate us individually before you condemn us wholesale. And the next time you're weighted down with worry about the next generation, go to an Allied Youth Council meeting.—"Allied News."

LOCAL BOYS GET BERTHS ON CARDS

Jerry and Jimmie Lake to Open Outdoor Card at Fairgrounds Friday Night

Springfield will contribute her own talent to the weekly wrestling card at the Lane county fairgrounds in Eugene Friday evening in the persons of Jerry and Jimmie Lake, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Max Lake. These two lads, Jimmie, 8, and Jerry, 4, have developed quite a following here and in Eugene. They have appeared on several occasions in Eugene, the last being about six weeks ago.

Max Lake, father of the two boys, who also serves as their trainer, has had considerable experience as a wrestler. He trained in Portland for some time and held a membership card at the Multnomah club for several years. He has taught his sons most of the fundamental holds and they seem to be adept pupils.

The boys will open the program at the fairgrounds Friday evening at 8:30. There will be another special event, as yet unannounced, before the big event between "Wildcat" Pete and Don Hill of Wichita, Kansas.

Admission prices for the wrestling matches have been reduced to 40 cents by Herb Owen and are tax free. Reserved seats are on sale for ringside and grandstand seats at this price. A canvas will be erected around the seats to close off the view of non-paying spectators.

Of considerable interest to local sports fans also is the announcement made by Herb Owen recently that he hopes to have Innis "Turkey Red" Yarnell scheduled for a main event place on a boxing card in Eugene between now and fall. Owen promoted the Yarnell-Steamboat Jackson affair at Klamath Falls, and is convinced that the Springfield boy is one of the most promising fighters on the Pacific coast.

CLEANLINESS IS SAID ESSENTIAL TO HEALTH

Children Lead All Groups in Illness and Disease; Education is Held Necessary

Nearly twenty thousand cases of communicable disease are reported in Oregon annually and of course many more are not reported. About half of these occur in children. These diseases furnish about 15 per cent of total deaths. In addition to the deaths and the economic and social losses from cases, one must add the permanent disabilities resulting from these diseases. From 50 per cent to 75 per cent of our crippled children owe their condition to infantile paralysis and tuberculosis. Damaged hearts and kidneys, increased susceptibility to other infections, are all found in the wake of communicable diseases among children. Economic and humanitarian motives alike demand that every known effective means of control be fully utilized and that further studies to increase our knowledge be expedited.

Physicians can reduce tremendously the possibility of infection by hospitalization and the proper care of cases of communicable diseases. There are certain fundamental principles which are essential to effective communicable disease control. Prompt reporting, particularly of the first cases in an outbreak, is the greatest importance. Isolation of the first cases frequently prevents an epidemic. A prompt investigation makes possible the early discovery of the source of infection. A recognition of the cause of the disease and the mode of transmission makes it possible to establish suitable control measures. A sound basis of control depends upon knowledge of each individual case, its source of infection, its contacts and potential contacts, as well as the social and environmental factors.

The value of personal cleanliness must be impressed upon all members of the community, especially when a communicable disease is present. The body should be kept clean by sufficiently frequent soap and water baths. The hands should always be washed before eating. Unclean hands and articles should be kept away from mouth, nose, eyes and ears. Do not use common or unclean eating, drinking or toilet articles of any kind, such as towels, tooth brushes, handkerchiefs, hair brushes, drinking cups, pipes and so forth. Avoid close exposure of mouth to spray from the nose and person as in coughing, sneezing, laughing or talking. All contacts should be inspected daily. All suspects should be isolated until a definite diagnosis is possible. All recognized cases should be quarantined, preferably by hospitalization, until they are certified by competent authorities that they are safe to return to the community.—State Board of Health.

CERTIFICATION PLAN TO INCLUDE BERRIES

Strawberry Plants Now Eligible for Inspection and Marking Under State Service

Just as the development of certification of seed has given Oregon producers a profitable outlet in this and other states for seed potatoes, so are the strawberry plant growers expected to profit from a new plan proposed for certification of strawberry planting stock.

The new plan for strawberry-plant certification has just been issued by the extension service of Oregon State college as drawn up by O. T. McWhorter, extension horticulturist, and S. M. Zeller, plant pathologist of the experiment station. It is designed as a practical plan whereby any grower desiring certification service may get it at nominal cost, while no other users use it any more than a potato grower has to use certification.

"Strawberry-plant certification is to provide the prospective purchaser a source of improved planting stock," says the announcement just published. "Such stock is that which has been improved through selection or other practices to the extent that it is vigorous, is true to the variety name and has a minimum of destructive strawberry diseases or pests."

It is pointed out that there is a demand for high grade, vigorous planting stock for use by Oregon growers and for sale to out-of-state markets. Such planting stock is now recognized as a requirement for high yields of quality fruit of the strawberry are to be expected. Much work has recently been done in studying strawberry diseases with the result that it is now known how serious many of these are, and it is realized how important good planting stock is in their control.

Any Oregon grower, firm or corporation agreeing to abide by the rules for strawberry-plant certification is eligible for the certification service, says the advance announcement.

PLANS FOR RELIEF VARY IN COUNTY

Varied Activities of Each County Noted in Reports of Extension Service

That people in all parts of the state are actively interested in plans to conserve and preserve as much of their surplus stocks of farm and garden produce as possible is evidenced in reports being given out each week by the extension service of the Oregon State college. Activities being tried in three counties are listed below:

Grants Pass—A traveling cannery to aid in conserving surplus foodstuffs of the county is an original idea being promoted jointly by the Josephine county extension service and the Grangers. Boiler, pressure cooker, tin cans, sealer and other needed equipment are being assembled on a four wheel trailer which will shortly establish a schedule for visits to various communities.

It is expected that a majority of the 445 families enrolled in the year round garden project will take advantage of this portable cannery to preserve their garden produce. A charge of a few cents per can will be made to cover cost of operation and supplies, to be paid in cash or in produce. Directing this program are Mrs. Sara Wertz, home demonstration agent; H. B. Howells, county agent; and a Pomona grange committee composed of George Wertz, Ernest Calhoun, Ben Coutant and Pete Dorsay.

St. Helens—Homemakers throughout Columbia county are building inexpensive evaporators for fruit and vegetable drying. Within the past three weeks approximately 500 mimeographed directions for constructing homemade dryers have been given out at the office of Mrs. Sarah Case, county home demonstration agent. Two of the dryers recommended were invented by Lucy A. Case, extension specialist in nutrition. They may be made of fruit crates, galvanized wire, a few nails and some hay wire.

Seaside—That homemakers of DeSchutes county are actively promoting the idea of a "homemade living" is evidenced by the gathering of 170 women who met to obtain the latest scientific information and methods on canning, drying and curing of home produced foods. The meeting was conducted by Lucy A. Case, nutrition specialist of the State college extension service, who demonstrated the various methods of canning strawberries, peas, rhubarb, salmon, meat, vegetable soup and sieved spinach for infant food. Models of homemade dryers and smokehouses were also shown.

Wheeler—The county extension specialist in nutrition, Lucy A. Case, extension specialist in nutrition. They may be made of fruit crates, galvanized wire, a few nails and some hay wire.

KOAC Operates On State Plan

Dean Alfred Powers Takes Over Control of Station for All Schools on July 1

A 12-hour schedule daily except Sunday has been resumed by KOAC the Oregon State college radio station, which on July 1 began a series of programs which will include lectures, music and other talent from not only the college but from University of Oregon, Oregon Normal school as well.

Control of the station was recently placed under the general extension service headed by Dean Alfred Powers of Eugene. Studios for this year at least will be maintained only at Corvallis as lack of funds have prevented contemplated remote control connections with other campuses at Salem.

Under the new organization a much broader list of program offerings is made possible by bringing specialists to the studios from Eugene, Monmouth and the Portland extension center. The farm and homemaker features as well as other offerings from the State college will be continued as formerly. W. L. Kaddery, program director for several years, continues as manager of operations and programs and head of the radio department of the general extension division.

EARWIG PARASITES TO GO TO 9 OREGON COUNTIES

The offer of the Oregon Experiment station and the Portland city earwig insectary to supply Oregon communities with colonies of parasitized earwigs has proved so popular that 30 colonies totaling 35,000 parasitized earwigs will be distributed through nine counties. No more orders can be filled this season.

The parasites previously released in Portland through the work of the insectary have proved an effective that it is proving difficult this year to get enough of the male earwigs to send out as parasitized colonies, says E. Dimick, state college entomologist in charge of the Portland work. Residents report the "wigs" as being actually scarce in many sections previously heavily infested. Orders are to be filled for communities in Lane, Clackamas, Polk, Benton, Douglas, Washington, Coos, Tillamook and Hood River counties, where county agents arranged with various clubs and civic organizations for the release of the colonies.

Son is Born
Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wood, 344 Fifth street Springfield, are the parents of a baby son born to them at the Eugene hospital on Tuesday, July 5, 1932.

Bend—That homemakers of Deschutes county are actively promoting the idea of a "homemade living" is evidenced by the gathering of 170 women who met to obtain the latest scientific information and methods on canning, drying and curing of home produced foods.

St. Helens—Homemakers throughout Columbia county are building inexpensive evaporators for fruit and vegetable drying.

Seaside—The county extension specialist in nutrition, Lucy A. Case, extension specialist in nutrition. They may be made of fruit crates, galvanized wire, a few nails and some hay wire.

OPERATORS OF TRUCKS SEE DANGER IN ROAD LAW

Approval of Initiative Truck Law Would Compel Many Mills to Close, It is Said

Indignant opposition to Oswald West's initiative measure was an anonymous voiced at Salem Friday by members of the Oregon Mill and Truck Operators association, in session here immediately following a special hearing before the State Highway Commission.

Mill and logging truck operators are alarmed because of the threatened destruction of an already seriously crippled lumber industry. In a resolution declaring their opposition to the West bill they assert that if the people of Oregon vote favorably on the bill it will be impossible to profitably use trucks in logging and mill operations and that many additional thousands of people in Oregon will be thrown out of employment and property investments destroyed.
