

Texas Cyclone To Meet Pete

Main Event Ends in Double Knock-Out Friday: "Wildcat" Gets Decision

Two wrestlers both knocked out and no one to award the decision to was the plight last Friday night of Vern Harrington, referee at the Lane county fairgrounds outdoor card featuring Don Hill of Wichita, Kansas, here for a return engagement with George "Wildcat" Pete. Both fell outside of the ropes and were knocked unconscious when their heads struck the hard ground. Pete recovered first and thus won the decision without taking a fall, that is unless each had one to his credit, after one hour and 20 minutes.

Walter Achlu took the deciding fall from Pat Reagan in a special event. He won the only fall of the 45 minute event in 30 minutes and the last 15 minutes were unproductive of falls.

A lanky lad from Texas state, Cyclone Mackey, of Galveston, Texas, has been imported this week to meet Pete in the main event at the fairgrounds. He will make his first appearance here Friday night. The other events on the card have not been announced.

GOOD KITCHEN LIGHT IMPORTANT ELEMENT

A survey made recently throughout the nation shows that the lighting in the average kitchen is entirely inadequate. It is reported that more than three-fourths of all kitchens are poorly lighted, causing eye strain and headaches and making work hard and disagreeable.

In line with a national effort now under way to lighten housework and improve living conditions generally, local electric dealers are featuring the new "kitchen daylight" type of lighting fixtures. These new units are priced at unbelievably low prices and can be immediately installed without additional wiring or fixtures. They are also suitable for use in the bedroom or bath where they give maximum efficiency at a low cost. Many local housewives have already installed this new type of fixture in their kitchens and are now enjoying the convenience and satisfaction of a properly lighted workroom.

MEN SEEK CAUSE OF BIRD'S EYE IN MAPLE
The U. S. forest products laboratory, Madison, Wis., and the Lake States forest experiment station are conducting experiments in the forests to determine the cause of bird's eye figure and whether or not it can be reproduced. Preliminary experiments, so far undertaken by these two agencies, consist of grafting trees. If the experiments are successful, highly figured trees may possibly be grown under favorable conditions at a rapid rate and in sufficient quantities to satisfy the future demand for quality bird's eye veneer.

Although many theories have been advanced to explain the cause of bird's eye figure in wood, on hypothesis has yet been advanced which satisfactorily explains this unique phenomenon. The presence of adventitious buds in the inner bark is the explanation most generally advanced. It is sometimes argued that the work of woodpeckers and sapsuckers causes "bird's eyes" to result. Other investigators advance the hypothesis that the figure is an inheritable characteristic. However, the forest products laboratory discounts all the above explanations and seems to attach significance to the observation that the bird's eye figure appears to occur in trees that have been crowded for some other reason suppressed in their rate of growth. Their efforts at determining the cause of this beautiful figure in wood, as well as their attempt to reproduce it, will be watched with keen interest.

SAND SWEEPS OVER MIX FILM LOCATION

Universal Pictures Corporation very nearly lost an entire set of motion picture camera and recording equipment when a raging sand storm all but buried its "Riders of Death Valley" camp on the Arizona Desert.

Tom Mix, star of the production, which finally made its appearance at the Fox-McDonald theatre today and Saturday, was forced to call in to play all of the cowboy and prospector knowledge that years of actual experience had taught him to supervise successfully the rescue of company and equipment.

The Western star fashioned gauze masks for Director Al Rogell, Louis Wilson, Fred Kohler and the other members of the cast and technical staff, and then set about removing all to safety by means of sleds and horses. No motor car was capable of coming within 20 miles of their location.

Red and White Lightning

U. S. Forest rangers distinguish two kinds of lightning, red and gluish-white. Red lightning is usually accompanied by heavy rain and rarely starts fires because of the wet condition of the trees and ground cover. White lightning occurs during "dry" thunderstorms and is a much dreaded source of forest fires.
