

NEEDY URGED TO PRESERVE FOOD

Assistance Now Offered in Canning of Surplus Supplies for Winter Use

TRANSIENTS CUT WOOD

Red Cross and County Both Offer Containers for Food; Exchange is Encouraged

The Lane county Red Cross will not be able to do much for needy families in Springfield and other communities next winter if these people do not start work at once and accumulate together as much surplus fruits and vegetables and other food supplies as possible at this time. Miss Phyllis Hartzog, Red Cross worker for this portion of Lane county, told members of the Lions club Friday noon in addressing them on the work which the Red Cross is doing.

Duties of a Red Cross worker are naturally very varied, said Miss Hartzog. This person must investigate all types of conditions and do the best possible to improve undesirable conditions when they appear. This includes relief, juvenile troubles, domestic affairs, illness, care of the poor, and many others.

Red Cross workers are now urging all needy people, or those who may find themselves at the mercy of charity next winter, to store away at least 96 quarts of fruits and vegetables for a family of four persons. They also stipulate that a certain number of these jars shall be filled with tomatoes which are very necessary for growing children.

A county cannery is being placed in operation this week and all kinds of foods can be preserved there. Tin can containers will be furnished the individual on a percentage basis, whereby the individual will give to the county a few filled cans for each group of empty ones so noted. This same plan is being followed by the Red Cross in the distribution of mason jars which are available for those who are unable to purchase them.

There is always an abundance of food supplies in this county at this time of the year and most persons can obtain quantities of fruits or vegetables in exchange for labor or other methods of barter, declared Miss Hartzog. If they have an unusually large amount of one commodity they are urged to can that item and later the surplus can be traded for fish or other products with others in other sections where a surplus of another commodity exists.

Fuel was also mentioned by the speaker as being a necessary item to procure now during the dry summer months.

The steam cooker which has been built by the county is being used in Eugene back of Skinner's butte this week. An expert canning operator is at the cooker all times and will travel with it when a schedule of visits, which Miss Gertrude L. Skow, home demonstration agent, is now preparing is released.

Establishment of a large municipal woodpile and the distribution of tickets among merchants to be given transients who apply for food was suggested as a means of overcoming this problem by Miss Hartzog. Such a plan was established at Florence with splendid results.

HATCHERY GETS STORAGE ROOM

Salmon to Be Kept in Cold Storage at Hatchery; Is Economy Move

A new cold storage plant to be used in the preservation of salmon carcasses for fish food purposes is being constructed now at the state hatchery at Vida.

The new storage room will eliminate the necessity of hauling the salmon from the fish racks where they are caught to Eugene for freezing and storage and then transporting them back again to the hatchery for feeding during the year. Officials of the hatchery think that the use of this new freezing room at the hatchery will bring about a saving sufficient to pay the cost of the new construction work within a period of three years.

Each year at this season several tons of salmon are taken from the river at the racks at Hendricks bridge and the eggs taken to the hatchery where they are hatched and the fish raised until released. The carcasses of these fish during previous years have been taken to Eugene where they have been frozen and then placed in storage being hauled to the hatchery as they are needed to feed the young fish.

AGED MAN TELLS STORY OF LIFE

Hard Work and Varied Experiences Make Life of 95 Year Man Interesting

Walking six miles to work each morning, spending the entire day cutting wood and then walking the same six miles home again is unusual, in these days of automobiles and congested highways which lead everywhere, but when a man of 95 does this each day and apparently thrives on it then you have something worth talking about.

Such a person is A. Street. That's his name, even if it does happen to seem a bit odd here in Springfield where we have given one of our prominent thoroughfares the same name.

He lives on south Second street and has been a resident of this city for the past year. He is now 95 years old and is living with his second wife who is 78 years old. He has one son, L. A. Street who lives east of Springfield, and a grandson one year old.

Mr. Street was born in London, England on April 2, 1837, and came to the United States with his parents when he was one year old in 1839. His father, Berry Street had been a leather tanner in England, but the family moved to a farm in Iowa when they came to the United States. They lived here for some years before going on to Missouri where they both died.

The spirit of adventure and an urge to travel overcame the young Mr. Street while his father farmed in Iowa so he set out for the Oklahoma country, at that time a territory under the domination of the Indians. Here he became a good friend of the Cherokee Indians and was given exemption herding cattle by Bob Laxton, Cherokee chief.

Leaving this adventuresome country he returned to Missouri and later to Kansas where he lived until coming to Springfield a year ago. Here he spends most of his time cutting and selling wood to the public. He canvasses districts seeking orders for the fir and maple wood which he sells and finds people very friendly although they are not able to purchase very much wood right now.

Mr. Street has lived through several periods of depression and thinks that this is the worst one of all, not because of actual effect, but because it has lasted longer than the others. The panic during the Cleveland administration was bad, but it lasted only a short while, he recalled.

When asked how the world treated him he replied that he had always managed to get along, although at times it was hard. Be truthful and honest of purpose and stick by these two things and one will always manage to get along somehow, he says.

As an indication of the friendly manner in which the public meets this aged man, this writer was stopped on the street recently and asked to read a letter which he had received and could not read, having left his glasses at home. The letter was sent from a woman in Eugene whom Mr. Street had called on in regard to wood early this summer, and she had written him at this time telling him that she was now ready to order several cords of wood if he would come to a certain office soon.

LIONS OFFER AID TO PARK TRINGLE

Members of Club Offer to Accept Part of Responsibility of Upkeep

Improvement of the triangle at the West approach of the Springfield bridge again seems to be a possibility and efforts are being made locally to have this project, which has been uncompleted since the opening of the bridge two years ago, finally completed.

Mrs. Jessie Honeyman, chairman of the roadside beautification committee was in Springfield recently informing local people that the plot of ground would probably be improved now if a local organization would assume responsibility for the upkeep of the same.

Members of the Lions club at their weekly meeting Friday passed a resolution asking the city council to proceed with the necessary steps to bring about this improvement, assuring that body that the club would assume at least a part of the responsibility for the upkeep.

The plan, which was brought before the council some months ago is to have the State Highway Commission build a curbing about the triangle so that vehicles could not drive over it. Then to make a fill of good soil over the area enclosed and to plant this in trees, shrubs, and lawn. Also to erect a sign pointing out that this is the junction of the McKenzie and Willamette highways and that Springfield is the gateway to the famous recreation area.

Further action on this matter is pending on steps taken by the council at their next meeting and ability of the Lions club committee to win members of the Highway Commission to the proposal. H. E. Maxey was added to the triangle beautification committee of the club Friday. Other members are I. M. Peterson and M. C. Kirkland.

CHAMBER BACKS PARK IMPROVEMENT MOVE

The Springfield Chamber of Commerce went on record at last night's meeting favoring the beautification of the triangle park at the junction of the McKenzie and Pacific highways and offered its assistance to the city administration in its upkeep if the improvement was made by the state. The chamber members felt that the park would add much to the attractiveness of the city's entrance and also that if properly marked would alleviate the confusion in motorists' minds as to just where the McKenzie highway junction was.

A committee was appointed to investigate the possibility of disposing of the old arch over the former road to the old dismantled bridge. The chamber would be glad to give it to any one who wishes to remove it. There is some good lumber and lighting fixtures in the arch.

The chamber expressed its sympathy to the Westfir community club in the death of William Ferrin, superintendent of the Western Lumber co.

M'KENZIE OILING STARTING NOW

Arrival of First Carload of Asphalt Expected in Springfield in Near Future

CONTRACTOR HERE TUES.

All of Uncompleted Stretch May Not Receive Oil This Summer Is Report

Application of the second coat of oil on completed portions of the McKenzie highway will start this week, probably Friday, it was announced here Tuesday by J. C. Compton, McMinnville contractor, who was here to make arrangements for the heating and unloading of the asphalt.

Mr. Compton, E. A. Collier, state highway engineer; and H. G. Smith, construction engineer for the state highway department, went up the McKenzie Wednesday afternoon to inspect the roads and to make necessary preparations for the start of the oiling work.

Two sections of the highway which were oiled last year will be given the second covering this year. These areas are from Blue river east for 10 miles, and from Hendricks bridge to Doyle Hill, about nine miles.

The work will start at the upper stretch and will then be moved to the lower section. After these two have been completed they will apply the first coat of oil to as much of the 15 mile section now being surfaced as is completed providing the weather is suitable for oiling work. It is unlikely that the entire 15 mile section from Doyle Hill to Nimrod will be oiled as the contractors who are doing the surfacing think it will be late in the fall before they complete their work over the entire distance.

The first load of wood to be used in heating the asphalt to the necessary degree was unloaded at the depot this morning and the equipment was expected to arrive today.

ONE WINS, TWO LOSE IN GOLF TOURNAMENT PLAY

Springfield Man Bids Strong to Win Championship Flight at Oakway Golf Course

Elmer Pyne and Donald Toomb were both defeated in the first match of the championship flight at the Oakway golf tournament Sunday and have been assigned places in the first flight where they will meet competitors this week-end. Pyne was defeated in the first match by George R. Shaw, and Harold Harbour took the match from Toomb.

William Moyer, salesman at the Mountain States Sales company, and recent arrival from Cottage Grove bids fair to be a strong contender for the championship of the tournament. He had little difficulty in taking his first match Sunday from H. E. Wilder of Eugene.

Moyer is a comparative newcomer on the Oakway course, having played there a few times during the past while a member of the Cottage Grove team, but he has already won the respect of the best golfers on the course.

He also has the honor of having won the La Grande trophy for the best individual golfer attending a state Lions club convention. He carried off this cup again at Klamath Falls bringing the cup into his possession for two consecutive years. The rules of the cup donation provide that a winner who succeeds in taking it three years in succession becomes permanent owner of it, so it looks as if Moyer may come home next year from Roseburg with the cup for keeps.
