

THURSTON YOUTH PASSES TUESDAY

Injury in Basketball Game Proves Fatal to Clyde Hart, Was in U. S. Army

Clyde Hart, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hart, passed away at the home of his parents Tuesday morning, September 5, 1932 at the age of 20 years. He had spent most of his life in Thurston, leaving there a few months before graduating from high school to enlist in the army for service in the Philippine Islands.

It was while in the army in the Islands that he was injured in a basketball game causing an infection in one knee which caused his removal to San Francisco. The infection spread to his lungs, causing death.

He leaves to mourn him besides his father and mother, one brother, Harold, and two sisters, Marjorie and Dorothy.

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning from the Poole-Gray-Bartholomew chapel in Springfield with Rev. Ralph Clark officiating. Interment was made at the Mt. Vernon cemetery.

COOL CREAM MAKES FAR SUPERIOR BUTTER

Bulletin Shows That Refrigeration Pays Even With Prices Exceptionally Low

"I just can't afford to make any improvements in these times," is the statement frequently heard from dairymen—and others—since low prices have made cash scarce. While this is doubtless tragically true in many cases, if a dairyman can get cash or credit for certain improvements he can make a far higher percentage return on the investment at low prices than at high.

Such at least is the conclusion drawn from figures contained in a recent bulletin on "Cream Refrigeration and Quality Butter," just published by the Oregon Experiment station and giving the results of practical tests of butter making from refrigerated cream from three farms over a period of one year.

Reporting on the economic importance to Oregon of quality butter, the authors, F. E. Price, C. J. Hurd and G. H. Wilster, give the following comparative figures:

Price Differences Shown
The difference between the wholesale price of butter of 92 score and 90 score at the present time (Early June, 1932) is only 1.5 cents per pound. This is equivalent to from 1.86c to 2.45c per pound of butterfat. On a percentage basis, it will be found that when the price of 90-score butter is 15c and that of 92-score butter is 17.5c to 18c, the 92-score butter sells at a price from 9.4 per cent to 12.5 per cent above the low scoring butter, whereas when the prices of 90 and 92-score butter are 38c to 40c, (the averages from 1926 to 1931) the 92-score butter sells at a price only 5.57 per cent greater than the lower grade butter.

"This emphasizes the advantage of producing the highest grade butter even when prices are low. The difference in price between various grades of butter justifies paying a differential in the price for the different grades of cream."

When farmers can obtain such a differential for sweet cream, farm refrigeration equipment such as is described in this new bulletin will return a profit even at present fairly high installation costs, the report shows, provided, of course, a fair volume of butterfat is produced. Such equipment permits shipment of cream as infrequently as once a week and still have it received at the creamery in excellent sweet-cream condition.

CHEVALIER GETS START IN GERMAN PRISON CAMP

'Buddy' Teaches Popular Tune to Frenchman Who Later Became Famous

"How Ya Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm, After They've Seen Parree?" He didn't know it at the time, but when he sang a song of that title in English in a Parisian music hall one night, Maurice Chevalier was laying the foundation for his movie career.

The French star, whose latest picture, "Love Me Tonight," comes to the McDonald Theatre Sunday, learned English as a prisoner in a German camp during the World War. Ronald Kennedy, an English soldier incarcerated with him, taught it to him.

When he escaped and returned to Paris, Chevalier got himself a job singing in a music hall. British and American soldiers on leave from the battle front made up a large portion of his audience.

One night he had an inspiration. Why not sing them a song in their own language?

Chevalier racked his memory and got together the words of the one English song he knew: "How Ya Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm, After They've Seen Parree?"

When he sang it, his British-American audience went wild. Encouraged by his first success, he repeated it after night, learning more and more English songs until he had a large repertoire. Even after the war ended and the soldiers went home, he kept on singing in English because French audiences liked it, whether or not they understood the words.

It was the knowledge of English that enabled him to accept a contract with Paramount in America, and develop into one of the English-speaking screen's most popular personalities.

News from the State of Oregon

Automobile license plates issued up to September 1 of this year showed a decrease of 20% under last year's sales. The total number of plates issued was 179,412 as against 223,872 a year ago—a difference of around 44,500 plates and a loss of over $1,000,000.00 in revenue.

CANDIDATES PROMISE REDUCTION OF TAXES

County Tax League Meeting Turns Out to Be Republican-Democratic Debate

That tax reduction would be the major factor in campaign arguments and promises in Lane county politics this fall was indicated Friday night at the Eugene Chamber of Commerce when many of the candidates for county and legislative offices appeared before a meeting called by the Lane County Tax Equalization League for the purpose of stating their campaign platforms.

As was expected, the major part of the evening turned out to be a political debate between County Judge, C. P. Barnard, republican candidate for re-election, and Fred Flak, democratic candidate for the post.

The entire meeting resolved itself into a group of democratic candidates promising to reduce expenses, and their republican opponents who asserted that expenses and expenditures had already been reduced as far as possible without curtailing some work which a considerable number of people demanded.

Outstanding demands of Mr. Flak in his platform were the abolition temporarily of the offices of County Agricultural Agent, County Home Demonstration agent, reduction by $500 the public health expenses, the elimination of road oiling, and of the emergency fund.

To these recommendations Judge Barnard replied that some of these things had already been accomplished and that the retention of the county agents was demanded by the people who pay taxes.

Other candidates promised to keep expenses down and to reduce them if possible. Donald Young, democratic candidate for district attorney, said he had promised a 10 per cent reduction before the primary, and that this has already been effected. He was willing to make further reductions if possible, but would not make promises the fulfillment of which would impair the functioning of the office.

Mr. Young also spoke on the proposed repeal of the state prohibition law, declaring that the measure would wipe out all liquor laws in the state and provide no means of enforcement of the federal act.

C. A. Swarts and Cal Pryor, republican and democratic candidates respectively for the position of county sheriff, were present and promised tax reduction.

Striking results of the application of Bordeaux spray for control of walnut blight is seen this year in the orchard of J. O. Holt who cooperated this season in demonstration experiment by Dr. P. W. Miller of the state college. Applications before and after blooming reduced the blight infection from 35 per cent on the check plot to 2.3 per cent. Tests this year show even more conclusively that time of application, even within a period of a few days, is the vital matter in success or failure of control, says Dr. Miller.
