FARMERS OIL COMPANIES GAIN HEADWAY IN STATE
Cooperative buying of oil, gasoline, and other petroleum products is gaining considerable headway among Oregon farmers, reports George O. Gatlin, extension marketing specialist at Oregon State college, who has been called upon to assist in organization of several joint concerns. The movement started about two years ago, since then three associations have been operated successfully in eastern Oregon and one in the Willamette valley.

Under the plan followed in this state the farmers form stock companies under the cooperative laws, sell to members or the public at regular established prices, and then return earnings or savings to members as patronage dividends. Most operate bulk stations only though some handle retail sales. Reports from the middlewest where the movement is widespread, show that 1000 companies have saved their members some $8,000,000 according to Gatlin.

Which is best for poultry—dried skim milk or creamery buttermilk? In answering this question F. E. Fox, associate professor in poultry husbandry at Oregon State college, says skim milk and buttermilk have practically the same feeding value, and whether it is in dry or liquid form is largely a matter of choice or convenience.

INVESTORS GIVEN SAFEGUARD TIPS

Analysis of Offerings Usually Reveals Probable Chance for Investment Success
When investing, use your common sense! Investigate first! Personal study to balance counsel of advisers and arguments of glib salesmen is always desirable before making any investment decision, says state corporation commissioner James W. Mott. Certain tests for worth can be made by any one, he said.

"Despite the fact that investment and stock selling concerns operating under the state blue sky laws undergo rigid scrutiny for their credentials, probabilities of fortune vary greatly, Mott explains. "The wise investor will first consider the intrinsic feasibility of the project itself," the commissioner suggests. "What demand exists for the new venture's service or product? What is the competition? Is there reasonable risk that the product to be turned out will be superseded by some new development?"

"History of other similar attempts often will give a good indication of risk. For instance, everyone knows that a large percentage of oil wells never produce. Industrial locations in some sections may be too expensive, raw material inadequate, power supply deficient or municipal ordinances onerous. "Perhaps most important is to determine character of the men who are promoting the project. Reputations for questionable dealings and inefficiency, or for energy and success are good indications of what again may be expected. "Lack of working capital may indicate probable eventual failure even of concerns fundamentally good," Mott points out. "Many manufacturing plants and industrial ventures initiated during the last several years have resulted in loss because of insufficient funds to 'get going'."

Minimum Clothing is Best
Clothing should be reduced to a minimum that secures comfort. This amount varies in different people according to the way the body has been educated. Too little clothing may result in causing the individual to catch cold, but this is less likely to happen if too little is habitually worn. Too little clothing may cause too much energy to be used in keeping warm. It used to be the custom to change the weight of clothing twice a year. In spring the heavy clothing was put away in moth balls, and taken out again in the fall. It has been found healthier not to make such abrupt seasonal changes but to change clothing from day to day to meet weather conditions. Dress according to the season.

DRESS ACCORDING TO WEATHER FOR HEALTH
Daily Changes to Conform with Climatic Conditions Advocated by Health Officer
The most important way in which clothing affects health is by its effect on temperature regulation, according to the Oregon State Board of Health which makes the following suggestions regarding the changing of clothing from season to season. The body maintains its constant temperature by a very intricate mechanism which is changed by the addition or removal of clothing. Clothing aids the natural processes of keeping warm. Clothing should be chosen to assist rather than hamper the efforts of the body to adapt itself to changing weather conditions. Enough clothing should be worn in cold weather to spare the body to some extent the task of producing heat, and a sufficient quantity of clothing should be worn in hot weather to enable the body easily to get rid of excess heat.

Comfort is an important guide and, to a certain extent, should dictate the choice of clothes. Too much clothing may do as much harm as too little. Too much clothing causes an excess of heat, and results in perspiration, which in its turn predisposes to chilling. Too much clothing causes dullness, drowsiness, headache, and a lack of energy. The overclothed child is apt to suffer from indigestion. The infant and the aged need more clothing because they have a less stable temperature regulation. The feeble need more clothing but often not as much as they think. If too much clothing is habitually worn the body is too much spared and becomes sensitive to temperature changes.

OREGON STATE WILL MAKE EASTERN TOUR

Oregon State College, Corvallis, Nov. 9—Faced with three tough games in 12 days the Oregon State college football team will end practice and leave here Thursday afternoon on one of the longest tours ever made by a Pacific coast conference team.

Oregon State will wind up its conference season against Montana in Missoula Saturday afternoon, and on the following Saturday will go into action against Fordham on the Polo grounds in New York. On Thanksgiving, just five days after, the Orangenems will complete their season's play against Detroit in Detroit.

Coach Paul J. Schlarer is taking three teams with him. For the first time since the opening game of the season the Orangenems should be able to enter the game against Fordham at full battle strength. Norman Franklin's arm has been mending fast and he will probably be in shape to give the New York fans a glimpse of his playing ability.

The trip will have its educational phases as well as the football background for the players. A faculty man is making the trip and will help the Beavers while away three hours a day with their studies. The football players will take in several sight seeing tours during the trip. On the journey east the Beavers will stop in Chicago for workouts on Stagg field at the University of Chicago. Main points of interest in the Windy City will be taken in by the team during its stay. After leaving Chicago the team will stop over in Washington, D. C. for a day and then go on to New York.

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 10 LBS. IN A WEEK
Mrs. Betty Luedeke of Dayton, writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY, and HARMLESSLY—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast go lighter on fatty meats, potatoes, butter, cream and pastries—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health. NEW PRESSURE TANK ON FIRE TRUCK INSTALLED
The new 140 gallon pressure tank designed to take the place of the 40 gallon chemical tank on the Springfield fire truck has been installed and is ready for use according to Hugh Jolliff, fire chief. The tank eliminates the necessity of using chemicals in fighting fires where the water supply must be carried on the truck, usually in fighting farm fires. Under the present arrangement the truck can be taken to a fire and a few people forming a bucket brigade can carry water from a well or other source to keep the tank full while the truck is pumping. Before the change was made in the equipment it was possible to pump 40 gallons of chemicals on the fire and then stop and reload the tank. Only one reload could be carried.
