

JENSEN-ACHIU IN ARMORY MATCH

Large Crowds Pack Arena for Jensen Matches; New Interest in Game Shown

Another grudge match will be featured at the Eugene Armory Friday night when Herb Owen, match-maker of the Eugene Commission, pits Walter Achiu against Thor Jensen in a return engagement.

A capacity house is expected for the event. The match last week between "Wildcat" Pete and Jensen drew the largest crowd to attend an armory card for a good many months.

This fellow Jensen, who comes from Elktion, is a rough and ready scrapper. He always leaves the impression that he is tough, but really quite respectable.

At any rate he has injected new life into the rassin' game in Eugene which no other has been able to do for some time.

It was in a match with Achiu a few weeks ago that Jensen became dirty at the close of the contest and took advantage of Achiu, thereby precipitating a near riot in which the audience threw him from the ring, injuring his shoulder.

The Pete-Jensen match last week was no tame affair. It is quite probable that Pete would have won had he not floored Vern Harrington, referee, with a blow which had been intended for Jensen. Pete pinned Jensen to the mat immediately afterwards, but the poor referee, thinking of his own protection, did not see it.

Letter From Denmark Inspired First Christmas Seal Sale

JACOB RIIS

THE first person in the United States to suggest the use of Christmas Seals to raise money to fight tuberculosis was Jacob Riis, the noted author, editor and settlement worker. In an article in the OUTLOOK for July, 1907, he described a stamp he had received in the mail from a friend in Denmark, where they had been sold to raise money for a hospital for tuberculous children. Riis urged the adoption of the idea in the United States.

This article came to the attention of Emily Bassett of Wilmington, Delaware, who decided to use seals as a means of raising money for a similar hospital on the banks of the Brandywine River. She designed the first seal, sold during the Christmas holidays of 1907.

The next year the project became national. After that tuberculosis associations soon were formed in every state and in many cities and towns, until today, as the sale of the 26th Christmas Seal begins, there are 294 such tuberculosis associations and committees in the country. And instead of less than 200 sanatoria, there are now 633. From coast to coast the seal pays for all year-round local health work, especially among children, and supports such projects as clinics, nursing who resides with the Morrill family. The Waltherville girls have organized another 4-H sewing club under the leadership of Mrs. Edith Page. Evelyn Hansen is president; Sylvia Vaughn vice-president; and Gladys Zehner secretary.
