Europe is ahead of America in in the past 150 years that it is no wonder our technicians and managers know better how to run them. CURRENT and civilization

The Gulf Stream is over 100 miles closer to shore off the New England coast than it normally is. That may make a lot of difference in the climate of the North Atlantic coast, as well of some other parts of the world.

I always thing of the Gulf Stream as the steam-heating system of western Europe. It starts in the boiler-the shallow Gulf of Mexico, where the water is heated clear to the bottom by the sun. Then it flows through the Florida straits and up the American coast until it meets the cold Greenland current and shoots off eastward, to Europe.

Ireland and England, 500 miles farther north than New York, would be uninhabitable if it were not for the warming effect of the Gulf Stream.

In the past there have been great migrations of people because of changes in the ocean currents affecting the temperature. It would be curious if a shift in the Gulf Stream should make palm trees and oranges grow on the Maine coast and icebergs to form in the Thames. Curious, but not impossible. REGULATION controversy

There is going to be a lot of controversy over the proposals of the government to regulate all kinds of business and industry. I am one of the old-fashioned Americans who believe that the less the government has to do with business the better. I think that more of our business trouble is due to too much government regulation in the past than too little. But I am afraid I am one of a small majority just

There are some things, however, which properly should be regulated. Those are lines of business which in the nature are more efficient as monopolies than in competition. That would include railroads, telegraph and telephone lines, electric lighting and power systems-everything which depends upon a public franchise. Then such natural prodraped collar and the graceful lines ducts as are irreplaceable, like oil, coal and minerals, should not be The new Eleanor blue crepe, with left to whoever wants to grab them collar and vest of a contrasting off, but placed under government finance the plan that early. This was part of the advance plan of sponsors of the bill who felt that the stimulus of increased farm purchasing power should precede the collection of the processing tax.

Unified Control is Goal The theory on wnich the domes tic allotment plan is based is that is necessary to reduce wheat production in this country to a level Restricted Acreage Expected to the domestic demand plus the probably export outlet. Without ome machinery to insure general adherence to such a reduction plan it cannot be put into effect except through the long and painful process of survival of the fittest

The new farm act provides ma chinery whereby the amount of necessary reduction will be determined and then each state, county and finally each wheat grower will age output.

A farmer then will have the op portunity to agree to cut his average down to the proposed amount and in return will be paid enough excess over the market price for his remaining harvest to boost his return per bushel to the pre-war exchange value of wheat. A farmer ment would continue to receive only the general market price which, as now, could be subject to the influence of world conditions. Thus the plan is to bring about acreage reduction by making it profitable for farmers generally to enter such voluntary agreements. and unprofitable for the "individualist" to remain outside.
