Dated and first published July 20, 1933. Last publication, August 7, 1933. VERA ELLEN MEARS, Administratrix. (J 20-27—A 3-10-17)

Washington, D. C., July 27—It is much easier to tell about what the administration is doing than it is to do it. The most revolutionary program of government activity in our times, and the largest federal program since the war, is in process of being put into effect. Every body is trying to do everything at once. Taking a lesson from war times, special administrative groups have been set up to speed things along, with the inevitable result that there has been a good deal of confusion as to where each group's authority begins and ends, and who is responsible for what.

So President Roosevelt, who, like many or most of those active in present-day government affairs, was a part of the war machinery and remembers how things were done then, has set up a "supreme council" for the purpose of coordinating the work of all the new governmental agencies, seeing that no wires get crossed and receiving reports every week of the progress that is being made.

The New Council
On this council, which is very much like the council of national defense during the war, there are, besides the members of the cabinet and the president, Lewis W. Douglas, director of the budget; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the reconstruction Finance Corporation; General Johnson; George Peek, administrator of agricultural adjustment; Henry Morgenthau Jr., governor of the Farm Credit administration; William F. Stevenson, chairman of the board of the Home Loan corporation; Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator; Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the board of the Tennessee Valley authority; Joseph B. Eastman, federal railroad coordinator; Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

To keep track of the work of the council and see that all of its decisions get to the right place, President Roosevelt has appointed F. C. Walker of New York, formerly of Montana, as its executive secretary. The council meets every Tuesday and already has begun to get the different parts of the administrative machinery moving more smoothly than they were.

Newspaper men and others in Washington who remember the tremendous activity of war times and the confusion for the first year, are agreed in saying that the speed with which this administration is getting into action far exceeds that of 1917.

Code Coming In
The big industries, which seemed to be holding back, are rushing in to Washington now with their codes of practice, most of which are entirely satisfactory to the administration, although all are subject to revision before final acceptance. In general, all the industries are agreed on such matters as minimum wage scales on a fair basis, maximum working hours, and the other requirements designed to put wage-earners back to work and restore the public's purchasing power. Nobody has objected, either, to the insistence of the president that "white-collar" workers shall come under the same regulations as wage-earners, to hours and pay.

The greatest difficulty in some of the industries, notably oil, is to get them to agree on what constitute fair trade practices. In the oil industry there is a sharp divergence between the members of the American Petroleum Institute and the so-called "independents," and they have submitted two distinct codes of practice, putting it up to General Johnson to decide between them. Whatever code is adopted, it is certain that it will be one which puts an effectual bar to unfair competition.

In the meantime, the president has promulgated orders for the regulation of oil production and its shipment in interstate commerce. There are heavy penalties for "bootleg" oil shipments, and the effort will be vigorous to keep production and shipments within the limits of normal demand.

The Textile Code
The rayon and silk industries, which had formulated no code of their own, have been placed by the president under the same code as the cotton spinners. It is regarded as probable that the wool fabricating industry will ask to come in under the same blanket, so that the entire textile manufacturing industry will operate on an equal schedule of hours and wages and with equal regard for each other's markets.

All of the new codes submitted by the steel, lumber, soft coal, electrical, cloak and suit, cement, shipbuilding and other industries contain provisions prohibiting the employment of children under sixteen, taking their cue from the cotton spinners, who voluntarily included this in their code. This is in effect what a great number of earnest social workers have been striving for years.

Public Works and Banks
The government's program of public works is getting under way with all the speed possible. It takes time to get such things started, but the projects already approved will certainly put a good many thousands of men at work before fall. Banks are being opened or liquidated as fast as possible, each instance of a reopened bank helping to stimulate business in its community. Commodity prices are rising, rapidly in those affected by foreign trade, more slowly but steadily in other lines. And, beyond doubt, business is improving steadily all over the country.

ones and bolted to them to strengthen those which were decaying.
Daughter Born — Mr. and Mrs. Robert Salter are the parents of a baby daughter born to them at their home, Twin Brooks, near Springfield, on Friday, July 21, 1933. C. F. BARBER, Clerk.

CALL FOR WARRANTS
Notice is hereby given that School District No. 19, in Lane County, Oregon, will pay at the office of clerk of said district, all warrants to and including number 2677, dated February 16, 1933. Interest ceases after July 29, 1933. C. F. BARBER, Clerk.

WARNING!
We wish to give you fair warning that you will soon be compelled to pay more for almost every item in our department store. Wholesale prices are raising daily and in many other cities are being passed immediately to the customer.
Our Prices Have Not Been Raised
but we will soon be compelled to raise greatly. Under the national recovery act it will be against the law to sell merchandise for less than cost. Whether we want to or not we will soon be compelled to raise the price of our merchandise.
We wish that you would understand the situation for your own sake. Drygoods, shoes and clothing that you must have can be purchased now for less than in a few weeks from now. We want to be fair with you otherwise we would say nothing and take the profit from the mark up when the recovery act goes into full force.
We are in business to sell goods and to serve the people of this community. We can serve you best and with greater savings to you if you

One Fish!
If you were depending upon fish for a meal, one fish would not be very satisfactory unless it was a big one.
By persistent effort, good bait and a normal amount of skill, most any fisherman can likely catch enough for a string.
Likewise the business man who advertises wisely is assured of a good catch.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO FIND OUT...
Unknown to you, your eyes may be defective. The only way of detecting poor sight is by an eyesight examination. Many years of practical experience in optometry assures you a thorough and scientific eye examination, and if glasses are not required you will be told so frankly when you come to this office. And it will cost you nothing for the examination. If glasses are needed they will be fitted not only so as to correct your vision, but will be attractive and comfortable as well. The charges are very reasonable.
