MOST OREGON COUNTIES NOW HAVE FARM AGENT

More counties in Oregon than ever before will have the services of county agents this year, reports F. L. Ballard, county agent leader, following completion of county budgets throughout the state. Thirty of the 36 counties have definitely arranged for agents, with Columbia county still endeavoring to raise the necessary match money by private subscription. Gilliam and Sherman counties have added agents, while Jefferson has joined with Cook in engaging one. Because of the vital connection between the extension agents and the work of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, one or two other counties are contemplating engaging agents, following decision of the AAA not to continue the practice of supplying emergency agents as was done during the wheat campaign.

SECOND ELECTRIC STUDY COURSE GIVEN BY KOAC

Another radio course in rural electrification, such as drew actual enrollment of 384 a year ago, is announced by KOAC, the state-owned station at Oregon State college. The course will start January 29 and will be given each Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 to 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon. Lesson outlines are sent to all who enroll. Last year these were requested by 103 farmers, 32 power representatives, 14 teachers and 235 agricultural students in high schools. The new course will be given by Clyde Walker and F. E. Price, agricultural engineers at the college, and will cover such subjects as electric feed grinding, water heating, chick brooding, soil warming, care of electric motors and wiring. Last year's successful course was the first of its kind ever offered by a radio station in the United States.

LOW COST FEED FOR COW SLISTED

Dairymen Find Difficulty in Purchasing Feedstuffs With Butterfat Prices Down

Considerable interest has been shown among dairymen in maintenance rations for dairy cattle, say dairy staff men at Oregon State college. With the low price of butterfat, many dairymen are finding it difficult to buy feedstuffs which are maintaining a fairly high price level. Also, there is a slow demand for milk cows, and beef prices are very low. The situation is more difficult in the Willamette valley where practically all of last year's oats and vetch hay crop was destroyed by winter freezing.

Should Cull Herd

It is certainly logical for every dairyman to cull his herd closely at the present time rather than purchase feed for them. Old cows, poor producers and unhealthy animals such as abortion reactors, difficult breeders, and animals with udder disorders may well be disposed of. Similarly, young heifers may be culled and only the choicest ones retained. It would be much more desirable to cull out one-fourth or even one-half of the herd and to feed those remaining somewhat better, than to attempt to maintain all the herd if the feed supply is limited.

The most economical ration to feed depends directly on the feed stuffs available on the particular farm, say the dairy specialists. A good quality of legume hay meets the requirements of growing heifers fairly well. If only grass or a cereal hay, such as at hay, is available, then it would be economical to supplement the ration of a growing yearling heifer with three quarters to one pound daily of a high protein concentrate such as peanut meal. It would cost about $2 to feed a protein supplement to a growing heifer until pastures should be available. The expenditure is justified if the animal is to be retained as a future dairy herd replacement.

Straw Contains Food Value

The question has been frequently asked recently whether dairy cattle can be maintained on straw. A good quality of straw will supply much of the energy requirements of cattle if they can be induced to consume enough of it, but it is so low in protein that a 600 pound heifer would have to consume approximately 100 pounds of straw daily to meet her protein requirements. The problem of straw feeding resolves itself, then, into the two considerations of getting cattle to consume it and supplying additional protein.

Molasses has long been used as an appetizer by diluting with water and pouring over unpalatable roughage to induce cattle to eat it. By pouring two to three pounds per animal daily of diluted molasses over straw, corn stover or a poor quality of hay, cattle may be induced to eat a sufficient amount to meet most of their nutritive requirements, except for digestible protein and minerals.

A more complete consideration of this subject is given in a new mimeograph circular prepared at the college dealing with emergency dairy rations.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mass movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name on the label. Remember a substitute. See the drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.
