New Rulings Made Affecting Persons Eligible for Benefits; Seek Local Group

Oregon wheat growers who have not heretofore signed acreage reduction contracts will have until April 15 to join with the owners of 82 per cent of the state's wheat acreage already in the nationwide plan of controlled production on the allotment basis with benefit payments, according to word received by the Oregon State college

New rulings permit any grower who had applied for a contract bethis year, only to aid those who fore January 1, but who for some reason did not complete it, to go ahead now and carry through the contract and receive all payments on the 1933 crop as well as those

One Year Men Eligible Now Another concession made is to the man who raised wheat only in 1932 of the base period and thus would have been allowed to raise only a third to a fifth of that acreage under the contract. The new plan is to let such "one-year men" raise that same acreage less the 15 per cent reduction, though their allotments on which benefit payments would be made will be figured the same as previously, by taking the 54 per cent of the average production over the base per
