what the AAA has so far failed to of wheat. It sure did that. Whea jumps from 79 cents in Chicago on May 1 to 93 cents on May 11 And grant, furthermore, that that is just what the Administration has been trying to accomplish. "But did the drought pay the farmers any bonuses of benefit payments? Not a cent. Do they get anything for not raising the wheat that the drought killed? Nary a dollar. Under the Administration's plans they may not have got much higher prices for their wheat, at least not as much as they thought they ought to have had, or believed that they had been prom ised. But under the AAA they don't have to raise wheat to get paid; they only have to cease raising it by contract and agreement with the Government. Under the drought they have ceased raising it, all right, but they haven't any contract with the elements, at least none that they can collect on. At Harvest Time
