OREGON CATTLE TO BE PURCHASED

Government Inspectors Now Paying Up To $20 Per Head In Severe Drouth Areas

Plans for extending the government program of cattle buying as a drouth relief measure already under way in Minnesota and South Dakota to all emergency drouth areas of the west were made by a conference of livestock men and agricultural college officials from 13 western states which met in Denver recently to consider drouth relief measures.

All the states represented at Denver have some counties in which drouth conditions are as severe as in the districts in which government is now buying cattle, said F. L. Ballard, Oregon county agent leader, who attended the conference. In order to reduce numbers of cattle in these areas in line with prospective feed supplies for the coming winter, liquidation beyond normal is necessary, and many farmers will undoubtedly sell to the government.

Meat Kept Off Open Market. Prices paid by government buyers are determined by an appraisal committee or an inspector from the bureau of animal industry, and range up to $20 for cattle two years old or over. The animals are turned over to the Surplus Relief corporation where they are examined and those suitable for canning are sent to canneries. The canned meat is then turned over to relief agencies, none of it going on to the open market. Cattle too poor to stand shipment are killed on the ranch.

Government cattle buying will be confined to emergency drouth areas, of which Oregon has two—Crook and Jefferson counties—until all the cattle offered in those districts are moved, and will then be extended to the secondary drouth areas, in which conditions are severe but where a real emergency does not exist at present. Three Oregon counties—Malheur, Harney and Wheeler—are now listed as secondary drouth areas. W. A. Schoenfeld, director of the Oregon experiment station, has been appointed drouth relief director for this state, and counties wishing to come within the provisions of the federal cattle buying program may make application to him through their county courts. The work of organizing and directing the sale of cattle in these areas will be carried on by the county agricultural agents.

Sheep Men Ask Aid. A group of sheep men appeared at the Denver conference and asked that the government also begin a program of sheep purchasing as a feed conservation measure, but the matter was referred to Washington officials for consideration, Mr. Ballard reports.

The conference also recommended that a substantial sum of money be set aside by FERA officials for the development of springs, water holes and the sinking of wells on ranges of western states where there is considerable grass but no water. Mr. Ballard said it was estimated that $100,000 could be used to advantage for this purpose in eastern Oregon.

Will Cull Oregon Herds. "The sale of cattle to the government in Oregon will be in the nature of a culling process, because there is no place in the state where drouth conditions are so severe that whole herds must be sacrificed, as is the case in many states in the western plains area," said Mr. Ballard.

Drouth Boosts Prices Of All Farm Products; Oregon Apple Crop Is Better

Some improvements in the general level of farm prices has resulted from the drouth conditions now involving nearly the entire central and western portions of the United States, according to a review of the agricultural situation just released by the office of the extension economist at Oregon State college.

Grains, hay, cotton and dairy products especially have increased in price because of the prospect for smaller supplies of these commodities. Well-finished meat animals have also tended to increase in price, says the report, but this is counter-balanced by lower prices and heavy marketings of poor quality stock from drouth areas.

No Food to Fatten Livestock

The sixteen north central and western states, in which small grains hay pastures and ranges have been most seriously damaged contain about 46 per cent of the nation's hay and pasture-consuming animals and about 54 per cent of the hogs. From these states come a large proportion of the total market supply of livestock. Normally much of the thin, unfinished stock arriving at markets are returned to the country for further grazing and finishing but recently, says the report, demand for these stockers and feeders has been greatly curtailed by shortage of hay and feed grains, both present and potential.

Fruit Average Normal

Fruit crop prospects cannot be accurately measured as yet, but, according to the report, United States production does not seem likely to fall much below last year and not more than 10 per cent below average. The pear crop, estimated on June 1 at 21,425,000 bushels, is a little larger than the short crop of last year but about 5 per cent less than average. Although Oregon has an estimated crop of 2,470,000 bushels, which is about a million bushels less than average, the three Pacific Coast states are expected to produce in excess of 15 million bushels, or about an average crop. Eastern state have poor pear prospects.

Oregon, on June 1, had a condition of apples somewhat better than a year previous and about the same as the 10-year average, but prospects for the United States generally are much below average.

Visitor From California—Mrs. Olive D. Basset of San Jose, California is here visiting with her niece, Mrs. Fred Louk.

STUDENTS MAKE OWN WAY THROUGH COLLEGE

At least $40,000 was earned by men and women during the past school year from jobs obtained through the student employment office at Oregon State college, according to the annual report made by those in charge. Most of this was from more or less steady positions where students earned either board or room or both, though much was from more than 2000 cash for part-time labor.

Men were willing to undergo a great deal of privation to remain in college, just as parents in many instances made exceptional sacrifices to keep children there, the report of Mrs. Lula Howard, men's employment secretary shows.

Many men batted, even after some board and room could be had for $15 a month, as they said they got by on $7 a month cash outlay by getting farm produce from home. Several mothers cooperated in operating a house for their children, taking turns cooking, and in bringing supplies from home.

CLUBBERS END BIG TIME: MORE ADULTS AT SCHOOL

The Four-H club summer session broke all records for numbers at Oregon State college and the regular adult session showed an early increase of 100 students over the low point of a year ago, which college officials point to as an indication of the lightening of both the financial and educational depression.

Total club registration was 787 compared with 561 last year. Of these 319 were boys and 468 were girls. Leaders commented on the exceptionally high type of youngsters present and their interest in their work and the uniformly good conduct. The adult session brought an early enrollment of 370 not counting those to come for later term courses or those in field parties.
