

THE DALLES TO SEEK LEGION MEET IN 1935

An active campaign to return the state convention of the American Legion to The Dalles in 1935 will be launched at Astoria when the delegates convene there August 23 for their 1934 convention.

The Dalles entertained the convention in 1922 and will send their drum and bugle corps to the convention again this year as a gesture for the convention.

Early days when The Dalles was an army outpost will be commemorated during the Legion convention in 1935 if the sessions are given that city.

CALIFORNIANS LEARN OF THREE-C BOYS FINDING OREGON FOREST CAMPS NEW JOBS IN NORTHWEST

A complete list of the improved forest camps of the national forests of Oregon has just been issued for distribution by the Automobile Club of southern California.

This list gives the location of 147 improved camps on the thirteen national forests of this state. These camps, according to the forest service, are located in natural forest settings, and are for the free use and enjoyment of the public. The improvements include water supply, sanitary accommodations and fire wood. Usually there are tables and camp stoves or fireplaces.

The service states that their purpose in developing these forest camps is to meet the needs of the modern forest visiting public, and to help concentrate campfires so that there will be less hazard to the forests from fires built in unsafe spots. Elaborate improvements purposely have been avoided so as to appeal to the lovers of natural forest beauty, and enable them to get away from the more sophisticated atmosphere of the cities.

There are no restrictions on the use of these forest camps, except a few simple requirements as to care with fire and sanitation, the reader is told.

Figure: compiled by the war department disclose that more men left the civilian conservation corps camps in May and June to accept private employment than during any previous two months since the emergency conservation work program was initiated in 1933.

The war department figures, compiled from reports received from commanding officers of the nine army corps areas, disclosed that 10,028 CCC men had been successful in locating private employment in May and that an estimated 10,286 had dropped out of the corps in June to accept outside employment.

During the first six months' period of emergency conservation work, ending September 30, 1933, 18,377 men were permitted to leave the corps to take outside employment.

The figures both for May and June disclose that more men are finding employment in the ninth corps area, which includes Montana, Washington, Idaho, Oregon, California, Nevada and Utah, than in any other section of the country.

NEW SCHOOL TEACHES MACHINE SHORTHAND. The School of Modern Stenography is the latest addition to Lane County's educational institutions. One of the most attractive courses of study offered by the school is machine shorthand. By the machine method the stenographer takes dictation at great speed and the notes are easily read capital English letters. In the use of the machine, (the "Stenotype") most of the hard, difficult features of pencil shorthand are eliminated. "Cold notes," eye and nerve strain are relieved with this method of taking dictation. The school is centrally located at 841 Willamette street. In charge of instruction is Mrs. Sadie Hall Pyke who for the past five years has been in charge of the commercial department of the Gold Beach Union high school but recently resigned to come to Eugene. Others active in the school are Mrs. Blanche R. Mack and E. N. Hathaway, business manager.
