THE GENERAL VISITS SPRINGFIELD

General Martin's appearance in Springfield confirms the report that he "campaigns with a chip on his shoulder." No doubt it will be completely knocked off at the November election. The general, who is campaigning for governor while drawing pay as a congressman, says times are good. No doubt they are for a congressman who has just voted himself a $100 a month raise in pay.

The best thing that could be said about General Martin is that if elected governor he would be governor in fact. His long army training fits him temperamentally to rule with an iron hand. However, no one would get a sympathetic hearing before him and as he is unfamiliar with many of the state's vital problems we fear the state's interest would suffer.

The general protested to us that he had a plan to better conditions. Reading his official statement in the Voters pamphlet fails to reveal any comprehensive plan. His campaign material is full of inaccurate statements in regard to facts that could easily be found out. Either he is ignorant of true conditions or listening to poorly informed advisors.

The general appears to us to be a reactionary riding on a radical band wagon. The rough road of radicalism annoys and irritates him so that he starts a fight at every cross road—usually over a question he knows little about. If the general were campaigning with his own crowd he no doubt would show up better.

Generals were never popular in the army and General Martin is not popular as a politician except among the Democratic wheel horses. He takes the same attitude toward the voters as he did toward enlisted men in the army. The only difference is that the voters talk back to him.

ANOTHER VOTE ON POWER

Another so-called Grange Power bill is on the ballot this election seeking to put the state into the power business and paving the way for voting a big block of general obligation bonds against property to build tax exempt utilities whether needed or not. The necessity for this bill has never been quite clear to us. Already there is sufficient legislation for cities and power districts wherever organized, to build power plants, generate, distribute and sell electrical energy. The president has said that power would be generated and distributed at Bonneville exclusively by the federal government so there would seem to be no room for state cooperation.

We have always felt that the cheap power talk was chiefly political. Saving a few cents on an electric light bill is not the difference between depression and prosperity. We would still be poor if we got our electricity for nothing. Lower food and clothing costs, less taxes, better housing and more employment mean a lot more to us in better living but they are poor political issues, displaying none of the magic as does power. Yet it is the proper solution of these problems on which prosperity rests.

It is a good time to start writing over and over the word "NO," so that you will be prepared and make no mistake when you get into the election booth with a flock of ballot measures before you.

The theory that we can spend as much in the campaign against depression as the nation did in war is false. It is like saying that a man with $100 can spend as much as a man with $1,000.

When a man's wrong and will not admit it, he always gets angry.

The rich depends upon the poor and the poor depends upon the rich or on the government.

THE BOOK

... the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Treasures ...

by BRUCE BARTON

JEREMIAH BUYS LAND

Between the days of Isaiah himself and the times of the Unknown whose chapters conclude the book came the dark period of the exile, when Jerusalem was destroyed and its best families carried away captive to Babylon. To this dark period Ezekiel and Jeremiah belong.

Ezekiel living in Babylon, sought by his exhortations to keep up the spirit of his fellow-countrymen and fix their hopes upon a restoration of the Holy City and the re-establishment of their national life.

Jeremiah, in Jerusalem, held high the ideal of personal and civic righteousness and spoke plain truths to the vassal king, who was allowed by the conquerors to maintain a pitiful remnant of authority and kingly show.

Jeremiah is one of the noblest characters of history and perhaps the bravest figure in the whole Old Testament. It is too bad that his book is so badly mixed up that the average reader can hardly follow it. He preached in the temple and in the palace and on the street corners, and even on the city dump; and neither promises nor threats could swerve him. Jehoiakim, the weak and futile king, let the temple go to ruin but fixed up his own palace with a rich lining of cedar and invited Jeremiah to inspect it.

"Very nice indeed," sneered Jeremiah. "As a king you're a fine judge of cedar. Your father did justice to the poor and needy, and it was well with him."

But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression and for violence to do it.

For such plain speaking and for his warnings that the Assyrians were sure to visit punishment upon the city, Jeremiah was cast into prison. Then occurred one of the most interesting business transactions of the Old Testament. The Assyrians, as Jeremiah had prophesied, did come, and they made their camp in Anathoth, where he had his own little farm. Jeremiah had long wanted to buy an adjoining piece of land owned by a relative, Hanameel. That wily old man, seeing an army of Assyrians camped on the land, said to himself: "Jeremiah is down there in prison and probably hasn't heard that the Assyrians have arrived. This is a good time for me to unload on him." So he hurried to the prison, offered the land, and Jeremiah bought it. But Jeremiah was not fooled. He knew he was buying ten thousand Assyrians and he took care to have the purchase properly recorded in the presence of witnesses, and the documents safely put away.

For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

Popular at the Party

October is the month when the frost is on the pumpkins and the ghosts and goblins walk. It is the occasion for gay Hallowe'en parties and lots of candies.

Eggimann's candies have long been the most popular confection at fall parties. Fat chocolate bonbons, succulent fruit drops, crisp, crunchy nut bits, are most tempting. Come in and see us before your party.

Why Sit in the Dark

$7.95

Do you know that three-fourths of all people suffer from defective vision? Inadequate light is a prominent cause. This is the new indirect type of light that has recently been developed by lighting engineers to correct the evils of improper and inadequate home lighting. There are no shadows, no glare, no eye-strain from this lamp. It lights the entire room with a soft comfortable glow of perfect light. The total price complete with lamp globes is only $7.95. Do not delay. If your home lighting is causing eye-strain and subsequent injury to your eyes, it should be corrected without delay.
