

LIST SURPLUS HAY SALE WITH AGENT

For the benefit of Oregon farmers having surplus hay for sale all Oregon county agents are making surveys to determine the amount, kind, and grade of hay for sale, according to O. S. Fletcher, county agent, who is conducting such a survey in Lane county. Information obtained in the various counties will be summarized by E. R. Jackman, extension farm crops specialist of the Oregon State college, and will be used in an effort to move surplus Oregon hay to drought areas.

County Agent Fletcher is now conducting a survey in Lane county and requests that all farmers having surplus hay for sale list their hay with him this week, either by letter or by giving the information at his office. People having surplus hay for sale should state that prompt action on the grade of hay, and the price expected for it, is desired. The county agent states that prompt action on the part of Lane county farmers is necessary if they are to share in the state-wide movement to sell the surplus hay of the state.

HEALTH SERVICE IN SCHOOL GOOD

Care Of Students At U. O., O. S. C. Rated Highest At Pacific Coast Session

University of Oregon, Eugene, Dec. 27—The plan for prevention and control of tuberculosis among students of the University of Oregon was declared the best of any reported on at the annual session of the Pacific Coast section of the American Student Health association, held recently in Palo Alto, California. It was stated here by Dr. Fred N. Miller, head of the university health service, upon his return from the meeting.

At the meeting, Dr. Miller outlined the procedure followed here and health physicians present declared it was not only superior to that followed in most other colleges on the Pacific coast, but one that is very effective and efficient. The same method is also followed at Oregon State college but was not reported on since no delegate from that institution was present. Dr. Miller said.

All Get T. B. Reaction Test

At the university here every student is given a thorough physical examination, and a tuberculosis test upon entrance. Those who show positive reaction to the test are then brought back to the health headquarters, have their chests X-rayed, and are thoroughly gone over for other signs of the disease. While only a few of those showing a positive reaction have tuberculosis in an active stage, those cases may then be treated.

This method makes it possible to catch the disease in an early stage, and through modern methods effect a check or cure. Dr. Miller points out. The health service also offers its services to students at any time after they enter the university, and students who report upon becoming ill are tested anew if they show any indications of tuberculosis.

Another effective service offered by the university is a complete physical examination for seniors. Students about to graduate are also urged to come in for a final check-up before leaving school. Dr. Miller says.

The precautions against tuberculosis are taken at the university in spite of the relatively low tuberculosis rate in Oregon, and the low rate among students here.

ILL SERVICE MEN ARE RECIPIENTS OF GIFTS

Six thousand gift bags from the Pacific and Mid-Western cities were shipped to the Philippine Islands, China, Hawaiian Islands, Guam, Samoa, and Alaska, by the Red Cross this year to brighten the Christmas season for soldiers and sailors, ill in post or station hospitals, and for those stationed at remote posts.

The bags contained toilet articles, needle and thread kits, games, cross-word puzzles, and kindred gifts.

OSC Science School Active

Corvallis—J. E. Simmons, associate professor of bacteriology at Oregon State college, is serving as the unofficial representative of the school of science at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Chicago during the Christmas holidays. As out-of-state travel funds are practically non-existent in the institutions these days, Professor Simmons is making the trip at his own expense, combining personal visits with his professional work. The school of science at OSC is making a rapid growth, both in numbers and scope of activity. All the students and staff members in the school are planning a first annual get-together early in January.

COMPTROLLER COMMENDS INSTITUTE OF BANKING

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The American Institute of Banking, said to be the most successful project of its kind in the field of applied adult education, has performed a valuable function in training bank clerks for "sound public service as well as personal success," J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, said here in a recent radio address. The institute is a section of the American Bankers Association.

"While imparting useful knowledge, it has improved the morals of banking personnel and has stimulated in its members an intelligent interest in national and international monetary problems," Mr. O'Connor said. "Its courses cover a wide field in banking. Among the subjects, one finds Bank Organization and Operation, Commercial Law, Negotiable Instruments Law, and Economics, in the Pre-Standard Division; followed by such subjects as Money and Banking, Credit Management, Financial Statement Analysis and Bank Management, in the Standard Division.

"Each and every subject is one which is necessary to a knowledge of banking. However, the institute does not stop here, but encourages graduate study in Corporation Finance, Trust Service, Farm Credit Administration and Business Forecasting. Again it emphasizes in special courses the importance of the less technical but highly beneficial study of Constructive Customer Relations, Banking Fundamentals and Public Speaking. No comment is necessary on these courses: their value is at once apparent."

S. P. TO SPEND MUCH FOR AIR CONDITIONING

With a $2,000,000 expenditure already authorized for the air-conditioning of equipment, the Southern Pacific company today announced that another transcontinental train will be added to its program, and that a large number of coaches and chair cars will be fitted with the temperature-control device.

Word just received by C. A. Olson, local agent, that the Pacific Limited, in daily service between San Francisco and Chicago, is to be air-conditioned throughout, in the manner of the Overland Limited, Golden State Limited, Sunset Limited and Cascade, previously provided for. Expenditures will be increased approximately $300,000 by expansion of the improvement program, it was revealed.

The work to be done upon coach equipment in connection with the air-conditioning calls for installation of the latest type adjustable seats. Floors will be covered with rubber tile, and the interior finish of the cars will be light colors. Large dressing rooms, of the Pullman type, will be provided for both men and women.

The new air-conditioned equipment will be ready at the opening of the summer tourist season and will give travelers the greatest measure of comfort in the history of railroading, company officials declared. Aside from maintaining an even temperature in the cars, the air-conditioning process serves to keep out dust and to minimize noise, it was pointed out.

WINTER TERM STARTS JAN. 2; FALL TOTAL 2577

CORVALLIS—Students of Oregon State college now scattered throughout the west for the holiday season, will return January 2 for registration for the winter term, which continues through the first three months of the new year. Either new or old students can begin at the start of any term without serious disruption of previous course plans.

A total of 2577 students were enrolled for the first term, an increase of 32 per cent compared with the fall term a year ago. Of these, 2363 came from the 36 Oregon counties, everyone of which was represented. Nineteen other states sent 187 students to the college, while three came from Alaska, two from Hawaii, six from Canada and one from China.

NEW ACCREDITED HERD RULE USED

As a result of a hearing conducted by Dr. W. H. Lytle, chief of the division of animal industry of the State Department of Agriculture, in his office on Friday, December 21, the requirements for establishing a cattle herd accredited as free from Bang's disease have been amended and revised, according to O. S. Fletcher, county agent, who attended the hearing with J. W. Maxwell, president of the Eugene Farmers Creamery.

In an order of December 22 by Max Gehlar, State Director of Agriculture, and Dr. Lytle, the requirements were revised and amended "to the extent that the definition of an 'accredited abortion free herd' shall mean any herd of cattle which has passed at least two successive abortion tests with no reacting cattle, provided Bang's disease control work has been started prior to January 1, 1936, after which date three successive abortion free tests shall be required; these tests being not less than eight nor more than twelve months apart; provided that no reacting cattle have been removed from such a herd within eight months. Any accredited herd certificate issued covering such a herd shall be valid for not more than twelve months."

County Agent Fletcher says that formerly four successive tests with no reacting cattle were required for accreditation and that the revision will assist materially in promoting the federal-state plan for the control of Bang's disease that is now under way in Lane county. Since the requirements have been amended, Oregon cattle owners may meet the requirements of the federal agreement for testing cattle for Bang's disease by making one test at their own expense after the free government test, providing the first test shows no reacting cattle.

Teacher Home—Miss Audrey McPherson is here from Klamath Falls where she teaches school to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McPherson.

Dinner at Shedd—Mr. and Mrs. Riley Snodgrass and daughter, Maxine, and Lloyd Garrison, spent Christmas dinner at the Alex Spontgrass home at Shedd.
