

SERA WORK IN OREGON LISTED

Relief Projects Now Underway Total 650; 24,000 Find Employment With Funds

More than 650 work relief projects are under way in the state of Oregon, employing close to 24,000 heads of families or single persons taken from the relief lists of 36 counties, according to information just issued by the State Relief Committee.

One of the big projects still under way calls for the cutting of 16,000 pounds of meat per day or better than 100,000 pounds a week. The project calls for nine men working three shifts per day, or 27 different jobs, on this meat work alone. The State Committee has approximately a 30-day meat supply on hand, but with the prospect of the AAA purchasing 5000 more head of cattle in Oregon immediately, this shortage and processing meat program may be continued.

Almost 1000 women are being employed by the SERA this winter on the sewing projects alone. In these units discarded clothing, sweaters, underwear, etc., are made into new garments, thoroughly sterilized, for the youth and adult of the family on relief and reports to the State Relief Committee and similar associations are high in their praise of the wonders accomplished by this sewing unit. Pottery and spinning classes also are being organized and are proving highly beneficial in the making of many useful and wearable articles for the unemployed. In the sewing unit, clothing and household necessities are also made from new materials, including shirts, underwear, housedresses, pants and overalls, jackets, sheets and pillow cases, towels and many other articles too numerous to mention.

Two additional projects for women have been the mattresses and comforter making units, calling for 20,000 of the latter this winter. These projects for women are caring for approximately 2000 women per month, according to figures of the State Relief Committee.

LANE VETERANS SHARE OF SOLDIER FUND LARGE

Payment Of Adjusted Certificates At This Time Would Bring Million To County

"Oregon will benefit to the extent of $20,679,034.90 if congress adopts the American Legion's proposal for immediate payment of the Adjusted Service Certificates, commonly misnamed the bonus, as an effective medium for distributing the Federal government's relief and recovery funds," says M. A. Pohl, commander of Springfield American Legion Post No. 40. "This plan not only assures an equitable distribution throughout the country but it will not add a dollar to the national debt."

A compilation of the distribution of Oregon's $20,679,034.90 by counties, of the spread throughout the state as prepared by Representative Wright Patman of Texas, author of the bill now before congress, shows that Lane county will receive the sum of $1,181,462.74 if the adjusted certificates are paid in full at this time.

In Multnomah county the total estimated receipts from the payment would reach the sum of $7,333,403.13.

These figures have been checked by the Veterans' Administration in Washington.

BANKING EVOLUTION

By R. S. HECHT
President American Bankers Association

BANKING at one time was a private business, but more recently has developed into a profession—a semi-public profession. This change has not come suddenly but is the result of an evolutionary process. Banking has grown and changed with the growth and change of our country.

The banker who has survived the trials and tribulations of the past few years has proven himself a man of courage and ability, and we may well expect him to meet the problems that lie before him with resolution and sound judgment.

Unfortunately it has become the fashion to blame our banking system all the troubles which the depression has brought. As a consequence we hear much of needed reform of banking by law. No one will deny that certain defects have developed in our existing banking laws which need correction, and that certain abuses were committed which no one wishes to defend or have remain possible in the future. Never before were bankers more determined than they are today to bring about whatever changes in our banking system are called for by the public welfare.

The Basis of Good Laws
The best results can and will be accomplished by normal processes and gradual adjustments of our present private banking structure—suitably supervised by proper authority—rather than by the passage of still more drastic laws, offering panaceas in the form of more government-owned or government-controlled financial organizations.

Lasting laws relating to any phase of human need are formed and modeled in the rough school of practical human experience and are usually the result of sound evolutionary processes rather than of sudden impulses to change fundamental principles.

If we analyze the new banking picture which has developed during the past eighteen months, we cannot help but arrive at the conclusion that evolutionary changes which have taken place in banking, and the economic life of the nation of which it is a part, have justified much of the banking legislation recently passed. As we look ahead and consider the new problems which are facing us we must inevitably come to the conclusion that some further changes in our banking laws will become necessary.

Voluntary Reform
It is not enough that bankers merely acquiesce in banking imposed by law. Zeal for evolutionary banking reform must be more aggressive than that. Banking practice itself, without compulsion of law, can and should reflect the changes and seasons of the times and difficulties through which the nation has passed and, even to a greater extent than law, render banking more truly a good public servant by voluntary self-reform. In no small measure is this accomplished by the better training of the members of the banking fraternity and by installing constantly higher ideals in those who are ultimately responsible for bank management.

As we march on into the world of tomorrow the banker has a greater opportunity for usefulness than ever before, and I hope that the service he will render to society will be so conscientious, so constructive and so satisfactory as to merit general approval and assure him his logical high place and leadership.
