WHAT HAVE THE REPUBLICANS TO OFFER?

This is a question we frequently hear from administration Democrats here at home, "What have the Republicans to offer?" It is asked with the implication that they have nothing to offer and the person asking it expects no answer or at least he is not interested if there is an answer.

This seems to be a stock question in congress as well as at home, "What have the Republicans to offer?" Congressman James W. Mott, of Oregon, in his characteristic vigorous manner answered this question in a speech in the house recently. After calling attention of all to the fact that the Republican members of congress have supported with a majority all relief and public works measures Mr. Mott says:

"Because we have always recognized and still recognize the necessity of emergency relief, both direct and indirect, that does not mean that we are wholly satisfied with the majority organization's plan for national recovery. Because we agree with you that it is the province of government to see that the people do not starve; it does not mean that we agree with you that the way to permanent recovery lies solely along the path of expenditures either for doles or made work."

Mr. Mott outlines the program the Republicans stand for in Congress:

"First. The spread of employment in private industry by shortening hours of labor to whatever extent may be necessary to reemploy all who are able to do the work required by modern industry.

"Second. Federal aid to private industry to enable it to make the necessary change from the old system of long hours and low wages to a new system of shorter hours and higher wages.

"Third. Assurance to employers that in operating business and industry with increased employment they will have a fair opportunity of receiving a reasonable return on their legitimately and usefully invested capital, and assurance to employees that they shall receive wages sufficient to give them not only a mere living but a purchasing power wherewith to buy back the products of industry.

"Fourth. Unemployment insurance to protect the employee in temporary emergency.

"Fifth. An old-age pension sufficient to retire, in decency and comfort, those who have passed the age of their economic usefulness and to remove them from competition with those who have not reached that age.

"Sixth. A comprehensive and uniform system of farm-mortgage refinancing at a rate of interest which the farmer can afford to pay and in an amount sufficient to liquidate his existing mortgages.

"Seventh. Assurance to the farmer of at least the cost of production plus a reasonable profit on that part of his commodity actually sold and consumed in this country.

"Eighth. Adequate tariff protection against all foreign commodities sold in this country in competition with our own, and in cases where tariffs do not afford such protection, then we insist upon resort either to quotas or embargoes or both.

"Ninth. Stabilization of the currency through definite legislation enactment and not through decrees issued in the discretion of the Chief Executive.

"Tenth. Return of all Federal legislative power to Congress, and resumption by Congress of the duties imposed on it by the Constitution."

The governor keeps affirming that he is taking this and that out of politics and his appointments are not political. All we can say to that is that some of the appointments he has made in the liquor and game commission are men who have always been very active in the democrat party; more so than in the work they have been chosen to do. Actions sometimes speak louder than words.

While we are considering social security we might face the fact that we have in this town and every other city in the country widowed mothers with small children who must go out to work to earn their living. When they leave the home unattended to work on SERA or other jobs in order that their children may not starve then the children suffer from inattention.

THE GREAT IDEA

When Gideon called for volunteers to fight the Midianites, thirty-two thousand responded. Gideon looked them over critically. He knew the conflicting motives that had brought them there—some for mere love of adventure; some because they were afraid to be taunted with cowardice; some for plunder; some to get away from their wives. He determined to weed them out at once:

"Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him go home to-night," he proclaimed.

The next morning twenty-two thousand had vanished. Only ten thousand remained.

Still Gideon was unsatisfied. He hit upon a stratagem. Down the hillside and across a little brook he led the whole band. It was a hot morning; the men were thirsty and tired; and Gideon, standing on the bank and watching, had a shrewd idea that character would show itself under the strain. Sure enough, of the ten thousand, a vast majority knelt down and pushed their faces into the cool, clear water, taking long refreshing draughts. But a few were too eager. They caught up the water in their hands, dashed it into their faces, and hurried across to the other bank, restless to be on!

Only a handful; only three hundred. But Gideon kept them and sent the rest home. Better three hundred who could not be held back from the battle than ten thousand who were merely halfheartedly ready to go.

With the three hundred he won.

That higher type of leadership which calls forth men's greatest energies by the promise of obstacles rather than the picture of rewards—that was the leadership of Jesus. By it he tempered the soft metal of his disciples' nature into keen hard steel. The final conference with which he prepared them for their work is thrilling in its majestic appeal to courage. Listen to the calm recital of the deprivations and dangers:

Get you no gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses. No wallet for your journey; neither two coats, nor shoes nor staff.

Beware of men: for they will deliver you up to councils and in their synagogues they will scourge you; yea and before governors and kings shall ye be brought for my sake.

He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that doth not take his cross and follow after me is not worthy of me.

He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

Watch the faces and the figures. See the shoulders straighten, the muscles of the lips grow hard. There is power in those faces that will not be withstood.

The great idea prevailed.

ALFALFA BETTER MILK RATION WITH GRAINS

Cows On Hay and Grain Nearly Double Quantity of Milk in O. S. C. Feed Tests

Dairy cows that receive a grain supplement with alfalfa hay are around 7 per cent more efficient in changing feed into milk than cows restricted to alfalfa hay alone, according to results of hay feeding tests conducted by the dairy department of the Oregon Experiment station.

Cows under test were divided into three groups, one receiving ordinary second crop alfalfa hay, another the same grade of hay chopped, and the third, hay plus grain. Records on all of the cows were kept over a 305 day lactation period, and corrections were made for differences in ages of the animals.

With these corrections it was found that the average cow produced 4464 pounds of 4 per cent milk when fed long hay alone, 6778 pounds from chopped hay alone, and 8416 pounds when fed hay and grain.

Pays to Chop Hay

It was concluded that it was economical to chop alfalfa hay at a cost of $2.25 per ton, regardless of the value of the hay, if butterfat sells for 30 cents a pound or above. It is not economical with butterfat selling below 20 cents a pound.

As to comparative profits in feeding hay alone or with grain, it was found that much depends on the relative prices of the product, hay and grain. If the price of grain is $30 a ton and alfalfa hay $10 a ton, which is approximately the price prevailing now in most alfalfa sections of the state, then it is economical to feed grain when butterfat is selling at 30 cents or more a pound.

Experiments are now in progress to get practical information on the most economical methods of supplementary feeding where dairy cattle are restricted largely to alfalfa hay. The most critical time for such feeding is in the first three or four months of the lactation period, as the entire cycle is influenced by the degree of feeding done in this early period.

DANGER AND THRILLS IN BENGAL LANCER'S LIFE

Many Scenes in Famous Picture Actually Made in India; Life Is Worth Little There

"They are opposed to any government that interferes with their constitutional right to shoot and be shot at."

That is Ernest B. Schoedsack's humorous report on the temperament of the warlike Northwest India tribes who come to the screen in Paramount's "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," coming Sunday to the McDonald theatre.

Schoedsack, famous for his work on "Rango," "Chang," "Grass" and other adventure films, headed an expedition into the wilderness and mountains of India to get more than two hundred thousand feet of film for "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer."

"The political situation around the famous Khyber Pass where we did much of our work can only be described as tricky," Schoedsack states. "There always has been trouble and killings on the border and, in these days of political agitation, there undoubtedly is more than usual."

"The native has no special grievance; he is a hillman whose only business seems to be fighting and he is wonderfully impartial as to whom he fights."

"No tribesman ever knows at what moment a rifle may be taking deadly aim at him from ambush. A man has been known to lie hidden for days, weeks, even months—his food brought secretly by an ally—all for the chance of potting a neighbor with whom he has quarreled."

To the footage taken by Schoedsack in India was added film made at five separate locations in California, under the direction of Henry Hathaway, to make the complete, colorful and stirring adventure spectacle of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing head the large cast which features only one woman, Kathleen Burke.

POTATO CONTROL PLAN PROPOSED UNDER AAA

Addition of potatoes to the list of basic commodities under the AAA is recommended by a committee representing 16 eastern and middlewestern states. The plan proposed would not include processing taxes and benefit payments, but would seek to limit production to approximate demand by allotting saleable tonnage among the potato growing states and then to individuals, and enforcing it by laying a tax of 50 cents per hundredweight on potatoes sold above the allotment. The production base proposed is the three highest years in the five-year period 1930-1934.

FARM BANK HOLDS BRIGHT OUTLOOK

Sufficient Moisture, Rising Farm Prices, Gains in Mortgage Payments Cited

"With agriculture of the Pacific Northwest making substantial progress back to a healthy normal condition, aided by the refinancing of accumulated indebtedness, provision for ample operating credit, rising farm prices and excellent moisture prospects, agencies of the Farm Credit Administration of Spokane will give specialized attention during 1935 to the important subject of marketing."

This is the statement made by A. C. Adams, general agent of the twelfth district and acting president of the Spokane Bank for Cooperatives, while attending a conference in Washington, D. C. which closed January 26.

Farm Conditions Bright

"General farming conditions in the northwest are brighter than in many other sections of the country. While Drought brought some hardships to eastern Montana and parts of southern Idaho and eastern Oregon, the four state of the twelfth district have fared well and the improved morale of our farmers is most heartening. Generous snowfall and rain give promise of good yields and continued improvement in 1935."

"The Federal Land Bank of Spokane has experienced a decided gain in mortgage installment collections and a much more hopeful spirit among its borrowers. Also, a new all-time record was established last year in the sale of acquired farms, indicating the return of confidence in northwest land as an investment. Farmers in the Twelfth district who obtained approximately $17,000,000 in short-term loans through their local production credit associations for financing their crops and livestock also have reflected the upturn in agriculture and have manifested their good faith by liquidating their notes promptly."

Much Money Loaned

As a factor contributing to this recovery of northwest agriculture the Federal land bank last year closed 21,398 real estate mortgage loans for $53,913,520, of which nearly 90 per cent went for refinancing accumulated indebtedness, enabling borrowers to obtain voluntary adjustments with their former creditors and carry their new loans, reduced to a basis of normal valuation, at an interest saving of approximately $750,000 a year.

"The Spokane Bank for Cooperatives, which has closed $2,682,000 in loans out of commitments totaling slightly more than $3,000,000 reports every loan in current condition with collections 100 per cent to date. The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane extended approximately $9,000,000 of credit to help northwest farmers, livestock men and cooperative associations to carry on in a normal way when other sources of credit were not readily available. But the important thing is that all of these credit services are being maintained on a sound business basis."

FORD TRUCK SALES FOR FEBRUARY BRISK

Seattle Branch Plant Has Orders For 4000 V-8s; Many Models Are Being Offered

Imagine a solid trainload of Ford V-8s nearly 10 miles long. A trainload that would reach from Springfield to Walthersville. Visualize 1000 boxcars with four brand new Ford V-8s in each car—4000 sleek new Ford V-8s for 1935 in one trainload. When you have pictured this, you then have an idea of the requirements of the Seattle Ford Branch necessary to take care of Ford Dealer business for only the month of February. These requirements approximate nearly $3,000,000 worth of new Ford V-8s.

"This is one way of pointing out the rush with which orders for the new Fords are pouring into dealerships throughout the entire northwestern territory," says H. H. Wilcox, Seattle branch manager of the Ford Motor company, "we have just been notified by Detroit that for the first ten days in January, this district has had the biggest truck and commercial sales since 1926, and sales in other parts of the country show similar gains."

This year the Ford passenger line includes nine body types, two being entirely new in the 1935 series. These are the Tudor and Fordor touring sedans with large built-in trunks for baggage at the rear of the cars.

The 5-window business coupe, the Tudor and Fordor sedans are also offered without Deluxe appointments.

NORTHWEST MILLS PAY HIGHEST LUMBER WAGE

Southern Workers in Cypress Timber Receive Only Half Of Pacific Coast Salaries

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 7—Wage rates studies received at the office of the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, Seattle, from the Lumber Code Authority, Washington, D. C. show that the highest wages in the lumber industry of the United States are paid in the Pacific Northwest. The highest rate paid in any division of the lumber industry of the United States is the average of 62.5 cents per hour for all employees in plants making Western red cedar shingles. These plants are almost entirely located in western Oregon and western Washington.

The second highest rate is paid to the average man in logging camps. He receives 61.2 cents per hour.

The lowest wages are paid in the south. The average employee in a cypress lumber operation in December 1933 receiving 28.3 cents per hour or less than half the rate in either shingle manufacture or logging in the Douglas fir area. Southern pine mills and camps with a minimum wage of 24 cents showed an average wage, all employees, in the latest month of 29.1 cents per hour. The comparable mills in the Pacific Northwest showed reporting to the West Coast Lumbermen's association with a 42.5 cents per hour minimum wage, paid the average worker 55.8 cents per hour.
