4-H SUMMER SCHOOL

DRAWN LARGE CROWD Annual Two Week Conclave At State College Will Be Closed Saturday; 1100 Attend

Two weeks of instruction and recreation are drawing to a close for the 1100 4-H boys and girls and their leaders attending the twenty-first annual 4-H club summer school on the Oregon State college campus at Corvallis. With delegations representing every county in Oregon with the exception of Jefferson, this is the largest club school ever held in Oregon, and shows an increase of approximately 40 per cent over last year. The school began June 10 and will close June 22.

These boys and girls are really the "cream of the crop," more than 600 of them attending on scholarships won at various fairs and other events, many more sent as delegates from their clubs in recognition of outstanding work, and still others paying their own way with money earned in their club projects.

Lane County Has 90 The Portland delegation is the largest this year with about 140 boys and girls, followed by Benton with 122 and Lane with 90. Many of the clubbers have attended one or more previous sessions and are well acquainted with the campus and each other when they arrive, but even the first-timers are pretty much at home after the first day or so.

Mornings, as usual, are devoted to a varied and comprehensive program of class and laboratory work, taught by regular members of the college faculty. A general assembly with prominent speakers follows the lunch hour each day, with the remainder of the afternoons spent in playing tennis, baseball and other games, swimming in the college tanks, or "hobnobbing" with new-found friends from other parts of the state. Club movies, parties, get-togethers and other entertainment features make merry evenings for the clubbers.

Jasper Girls Elected June Clark of Portland is president of the girls this year, and Cal Monroe of Clackamas county heads the boys' organization. Other officers elected by the girls are Joy McDonald, Multnomah county, vice-president; Elizabeth Holcomb, Lane county, secretary; and Janet

TREE TROOPERS ADOPT FAWN IN COQUILLE

"Chink of China Flats," was an orphan without friends till she stood by the roadside and flagged a CCC truck loaded with boys from China Flat CCC camp on the south fork of the Coquille river, Coos, county. Now this tender eyed fawn is idolized by 200 tree troopers who could not resist her trusting advances. The boys say this graceful, knee high orphan of the wild always goes more than half way to make friends with visiting dogs, but pounces boldly with her tiny front hoofs at any canine attempting to impose upon her good nature.

"Chink" is not yet weaned from the bottle but nursing does not worry the boys from Illinois, most of whom had never seen a wild deer till Chink came into their lives.

For canning peas, and all other non-acid vegetables for that matter, packing hot into the jars and using a pressure cooker is the only method recommended for safety, according to Miss Case. Bring the peas to boil in water to cover, she says, and in the meantime boil the jars, lids and rubbers. Fill the jars, while they are sitting in boiling water, to within 1/2 inch of the top with the boiling hot peas. Then fill the jars also to within 1/2 inch of the top with the liquid in which the peas were cooked. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt to each pint of peas.

Small Jars Are Best Containers larger than pint jars or No. 2 cans are not recommended for peas, she points out. Most types of modern jars can be sealed immediately after filling with the hot food before processing, she says, but wire clamp jars seem to be exceptions to this rule at times. Sealing before processing keeps the liquid in the jars. Screw band jars should be retightened after processing.

Place the hot jars in the pressure cooker with boiling water 1/2 inch over the rack and the pet cock open, she says. Fasten the top of the cooker and leave the pet cock open. Let the steam escape for five minutes, then close the pet cock and bring the pressure to 10 pounds. Process pint jars 45 minutes, quart jars 55 minutes, and No. 2 and 2 1/2 cans 45 minutes at 10 pounds pressure. When the time is up, turn off the heat and let the pressure return to zero, and then wait a minute or so before opening the pet cock gradually. When the sound of air going into the cooker is no longer heard open the cooker. When boiling stops inside the jars, remove them from the cooker and cool away from a draft.

Shot in Hip—Norman Bond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bond of Marcola narrowly escaped serious injury Tuesday morning when he was accidentally shot through the hip with a revolver bullet. The bullet barely missed the bone. Dr. Jones removed the bullet from the victim at the Pacific hospital.

When the gasoline tax was increased from 4 to 5 cents in 1933, the Oregon State Motor association stated that a 5-cent tax was too much of a tax on a single gallon of gas, but we agreed that 1 cent of tax should be added to compensate partially for the reduction in license fees incurred when the license fee was reduced to $5.

The motor association is still of the opinion that a 5-cent tax is too much of a burden to impose on a commodity whose manufactured cost is under 8 cents a gallon. The additional 1-cent federal tax means the collection of $1,700,000 from Oregon motorists each year beyond the 5-cent gas tax limit.

"Before the end of June congress will have acted on the question of perpetuation of the federal tax on gasoline, tires and accessories."

Motor Group to Ask Less Gas Tax

Two Hours From Garden To Can Held Good Rule; Pressure Cooker Is Best

With the pea canning season about at its height in the homes of western Oregon, Miss Lucy Case, extension specialist in foods and nutrition at Oregon State college, offers a few pointers for handling this task in the easiest and most successful manner.

Two hours from garden to can is a good rule to follow in canning green peas, Miss Case says. The shorter the time the more of the sweet natural flavor will be retained, because the sugar in peas quickly turns to starch after they are picked.

Use only young, tender peas, she advises, and wash them carefully. They may be shelled by hand, but many find it quicker to dip them in hot water and run them, stem end first through the wringer of the washing machine, or through a special pea sheller. The pods go through the wringer and the peas fall back and are caught on a clean cloth in the tub. Even though shelling by hand, the task is easier if the pods are first dipped in hot water, Miss Case says.

For canning peas, and all other non-acid vegetables for that matter, packing hot into the jars and using a pressure cooker is the only method recommended for safety, according to Miss Case. Bring the peas to boil in water to cover, she says, and in the meantime boil the jars, lids and rubbers. BUSINESS HOLDS GAINS IN OREGON

May Retail Business Up; Wholesale Trade Lower As NIRA Hangs In Balance

Despite the unfavorable situation created by the lumber strike and uncertainty regarding pending legislation, business in the Portland area during May showed remarkable stability according to the June issue of Commonwealth, Inc., Business Survey. Activity in industries dependent upon lumber for their source of raw material were somewhat curtailed. Furniture factories and woodworking plants closed during part of the month. Other industrial lines, however, seemed to be affected little.

Retail trade showed unexpected strength during May after a disappointing early spring and, it was thought, surpassed the corresponding 1934 month by about 10 to 15 per cent. Wholesale trade, however, was reported as being slower due to the possibility of lower prices as a result of the Supreme Court's NIRA decision. Retailers bought cautiously in anticipation of this development.

Oregon's brightest spot, said David Eccles, editor of Business Survey, is eastern Oregon. That section is less affected by the lumber strike and its trade is extremely active. Purchases, it is said, are in large measure for cash. However, Eccles believes that the undercurrent of business is strongly toward recovery at this time despite labor troubles and uncertainties.
