

DELAY ACTION ON WOOL LICENSE

Wheat Contracts To Be Signed During Next Month For Four More Years

The hearing on a proposed license for wool and mohair dealers previously scheduled by the AAA to be held in wool marketing centers, including Portland, has been postponed indefinitely. The Portland hearing had previously been set for July 15 and 16.

The postponement was taken pending the result of congressional action on the AAA amendments now being considered. This action will determine the status of wool and mohair under the act.

Meanwhile the Washington officials have announced that these pending amendments clearly provide for continuance of existing marketing agreements and licenses under the agricultural adjustment act.

Other sections of the amendments, drawn to conform to the recent NRA decision, provide that in the future the secretary of agriculture will issue orders regulating the handling of milk, fruits, nuts and vegetables in the current of interstate or foreign commerce, or in substantial competition with such commerce.

Growers Scan Contracts
New wheat contracts probably be ready for producers' signatures sometime in July or early August, according to latest word received from Washington by the Oregon State college extension service. The new contract is to extend over the four-year period beginning with 1936.

To consider final suggestions for improving the new contracts, grower representatives from wheat producing states were called to confer in Washington July 1 and 2 with Chester C. Davis, administrator, and George E. Farrell, head of the grain division of the AAA.

Will Steen, chairman of the Umatilla county wheat control association, is the Oregon representative who sat in on this meeting. The conference of producers follows the referendum of a month ago when wheat growers voted 404,417 to 43,303 to continue wheat production adjustment.

RED CROSS HAS OWN EXHIBIT AT SAN DIEGO

Constructed and designed in the headquarters of the American National Red Cross in Washington, a colorful exhibit picturing the various peace-time services of the Red Cross in all sections of the country will be placed on display this week at the California Pacific International Exposition under the sponsorship of the San Diego Chapter, Red Cross. This announcement was made today by A. L. Schaffer, Manager of the Pacific Branch, San Francisco.

The central background of the display is a massed group of Red Cross flags unfurled before an artistically painted bed of white clouds, lending an air of loftiness as well as movement to the scene. Before the flag banks of green fern form a fitting foreground and a delightful contrast against the sharp color in the flags and the modern designing employed in the border decorations.

In eight panels illuminated by a system of concealed lighting effects by the Red Cross are portrayed through paintings made on canvas from actual photographs taken on the field of operations in scattered parts of the country.

Some of the scenes included a view of a family sitting, hopeless and bewildered, among the few broken bits of household goods they have been able to collect and return to the ruin of their home following a recent tornado in North Carolina. Another scene comes from a home where the Red Cross nurse is assisting and instructing in infant care.

CALIFORNIA DEER LOOK OUT! FARMER TO SHOOT

Gardeners at Cannon Beach reported having trouble keeping elk from devouring their crops evidently are not alone in their troubles, judging from an item in a recent issue of the Pacific Rural Press, prominent California farm paper, which is as follows:

"W. P. Hall, Hat Creek rancher near Redding, has been granted a permit to shoot any kind of deer any time he wishes, if they happen to be on his property. The permit dates from May 15 to December 31 and was granted after Hall complained the animals were feeding on his alfalfa fields, causing an estimated loss of five tons of hay annually."

IRRIGATED FARMS TO PROTECT CROP

Light Early Summer Rainfall Threatens To Affect Fruit, and Nut Yields Of State

Farmers throughout western Oregon are rushing installation of farm irrigation plants to save crops from severe loss caused by extreme shortage of rain in the past three months, reports Art King, extension soils specialist at Oregon State college. Calls for assistance became so numerous that an additional man was assigned to irrigation duty by the extension service during the emergency.

At most places in western Oregon less than an inch of effective rain fell during April, May and up to the last week in June. No single rain during that period was more than a half inch, the amount considered necessary to benefit major crops by adding usable moisture to the soil. Some other showers, increasing the total beyond an inch, were so slight in extent as to be of no real benefit, King reports.

Many growers installing emergency systems expect them to pay for themselves in crops this year. Many prune and nut crops will be greatly reduced if not destroyed unless heavy rains come or irrigation water is provided, King believes. County agents are prepared to get assistance for those who still want to establish systems, says King.

RESTORE PORT FUNDS ASKS HARBOR GROUP
