The sound money speeches, coming at such a time, with the same old sing song, gives one a feeling of disgust. Why can't political speakers get up something new? Some people think this money question could rest till at least the affair with Spain has been settled.

In our opinion the president will skin down four aces when the time comes to show his hand. The public knows nothing of the reasons which are causing all this delay. It is enough to know that President McKinley, our president, is conducting affairs, ably assisted by bright, patriotic statesmen, who know their business, and mean to be respected. It is not good management to precipitate a crisis, just to show our grit. We can thrash Spain fast enough, and to our satisfaction too, after the ball is opened. But we want to be good and ready to fight, so that we can get in the middle of it, and stay there. When McKinley unfolds Old Glory to the breeze, he wants to be sure of his position, as the blood of America's bravest is too sacred to be spilled needlessly.

One of the greatest mistakes Pres. McKinley made, and that too, right in the beginning, was in not calling some of Scios' "smart alecks" into the cabinet. It is disgusting to hear men, who claim and want to be recognized as men, criticising and scoring our prsident, when they themselves know nothing, whatever, of statesmanship, and could scarcely give a sensible account of the facts which led to our present trouble with Spain.

LIFE.

Life's but a troubled river, flowing on
To gain the ocean, whose grim name is Fate.
We float upon its surface—then are gone.
Learning its lessons when, alas! too late.

We quarrel with the sunshine while 'tis there,
Pluck not the flowers that blossom all around,
Heed not the beauties in this world so fair,
Till clouds close thicken and the vision's drowned—

Drowned in old age or in our faulty reason,
Which sees not what things are or ought to be.
So dwarfed our knowledge, truth confounds with treason.
And pride won't tell us we've not power to see.

Contentment! 'Tis a lesson past our learning,
We scorn the happiness the gods do send;
For far-off worlds and myths we're always yearning.
To stoop to beauties near our minds won't bend.

So life is but one long and fruitless straining
To get beyond what is within our reach.
The river flows on without a moment deigning
To listen to the wisdom we would teach.

And Fate is reached—the dark and seething ocean
Which covers all, and well its secrets keep;
We float along with weary, onward motion,
Till all is over and in death we sleep.

—Charlotte Mansfield, in Pall Mall Magazine.

The greatest men in all countries commend and applaud our president for the calm, cool christian like manner in which he has handled the Cuban proposition. It is a pretty good sign of some thing wrong for a loud mouthed fellow to berate his country and the president.'

New Torpedoes.

Torpedoes are divided into two general classes—stationary and movable. The former consists of the buoyant and ground mine, while the latter class is subdivided into the automobile and dirigible. These terms have been narrowed until now the fixed class is generally known as the submarine mine, while the word torpedo is applied to the movable class. The buoyant mines are exploded in contact with or very close to the bottom or sides of a vessel under water, while the ground mine acts at a much greater distance. All mines are divided into other classes, which depend for their nomenclature as to whether or not it is under the control of an operator. In all cases the controlling agent is electricity. The depth of water in a harbor has much to do with the form of torpedo used, and in channels where there is less than thirty feet at high tide, the mine case, which rests on the bottom, has the shape of the segment of a sphere with a flat bottom. The electrical apparatus is attached to a buoy, anchored to the case and submerged four feet. The explosive charge is generally about two hundred and fifty pounds of dynamite or wet gun cotton. The buoyant mine is a hollow sphere, constructed of steel, having a ring at the top for handling, and directly opposite a hole for loading and inserting the electrical apparatus. Over this is fitted a cap for attatching the mooring chain and cable. It is generally submerged about four feet below low water, and the explosive change is one hundred pounds of dynmite or wet gun cotton. A mushroom anchor holds the mine in position. Another form of submarine mine is one which will explode by contact with a ship's bottom; but as these are dangerous both to friend and foe, they are now seldom used in any scheme for defense.—Collier's Weekly.

"France will never learn wisdom. It always has to be put on the end of a bayonet, like a bit of toast cheese, and thrust down her throat."—Collier's Weekly.

The largest telegraph station in the world is at St. Martin's-le Grand, London. Their are about 3,000 operators, 1,000 of whom are women.

The Director of the United States Mint, from information now in this possession, states that there is substantial evidence that the world's output of gold for the calendar year 1897 will approximate, if it does not exceed, $240,000,000 in value, an increase of close to 20 per cent over 1896. Of this total the United States produced approximately $61,-200,000, an increase of $8,400,000 over 1896; Africa, $ 5,000,000, an increase of $15,000,000; Australasia, $51,000,000, an increase of $6,800,000, Mexico; $10,000,000, an increase of $1,700,000, Canada, $7, 500,000 an increase of $4,700,000; India, $7,500,-000, an increase of $1,400,000; Russia, $25,000,000 an increase of $3,500,000.

The indications for the United States, says Derector Preston, are that Colorado will lead in the prodution of gold for 1897, as it is estimated by former Governor Grant that it will not be less than $20,000,000. California will follow with a probably $19,000,000. With the exception of the States of the South Appalachian range, he believes that there will be an increase in every producing State and Territory of the gold products over that of 1896.

Take things always by the smooth handle
We seldom repent of having eaten too little.
Pride costs more than hunger, thirst and cold.
Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.
Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.
Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap.
Never put off until to morrow what you can do to-day.
Never spend your money before you have earned it.
How much pain the evils have cost us that have never happened.
When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, count a hundred.

Beauty Is Blood Deep.
Clean blood means a clean skin. No beauty without it. Cascarets, Candy Cathartic clean your blood and keep it clean, by stirring up the lazy liver and driving all impurities from the body. Begin to-day to banish pimples, boils, blotches, blackheads, and that sickly bilious complexion by taking Cascarets,—beauty for ten cents. All druggists, satisfaction guaranteed, 10c, 25c, 50c.
