BY WAY OF INTRODUCTION.

It has been a custom among newspaper men for ages that when a new paper is started or an old one takes charge of one already established, that he make some kind of an excuse for his presence there. In the present case, however, we will desist, further than to say that THE SANTIAM NEWS will be published each week as in the past, and under our direct and personal supervision. We come among you a stranger and have much more to contend with on that account than many of our readers are aware of. In issuing THE NEWS to our readers we shall endeavor to make it strictly a local paper, advocating at all times the interests and upbuilding of Scio and vacinity. We shall take no part in political discussions other than that taken from a strictly independent standpoint. We shall reserve the right to criticize or uphold the acts of any individual—regardless of party affiliations—seeking favor and position within the gift of the people. We shall try to furnish you with as good a home paper as circumstances will permit, and in return we shall ask and expect the liberal support both from the business men and the public generally,

Respectfully,
IRA A. PHELPS,
Editor and Publisher.

In about a century thirteen feeble colonies, a struggling and straggling outpost of civilization, have grown to such proportions that they are sending a navy across the sea to lay down the law to a nation that was old and great for centuries before their habitat even had a place on the maps of the world. It is indeed an astonishing spectacle. It will make Europe understand that her familiar historian, which almost ignore us, must be rewritten. It will open Europe's eyes to the truth that we are not to be the toys of diplomatic games concocted in Berlin, Vienna and her other capitals.

We went to war with reluctance when the Maine was blown up by treachery, and we are not ready for peace except upon our own terms, and when we are in full possession of Porto Rico and the Philippines. France ought to have made peace the morning after the surrender of Sedan, but she did not feel that she was beaten until Paris had fallen. Russia had to rush up to the gates of Constantinople to humble the Turk, and it looks very much as if Spain will not know she is beaten until we take the Canaries and move our squadron against Cadiz, Barcelona and Ferrol.

Despatches recieved in Madrid from Havana state that there is "an enthusiastic desire in the city to continue the war." A few hours' bombardment of our fleet, reinforced by the portable earthquakes projected from the Vesuvius, would greatly moderate this desire. It is one of the mysteries of this war why Havana, the seat and sybol of Spain's power in Cuba, has been let so severely alone.

The war between the United States and Spain is now fast nearing an end, and should there not be another gun fired the victories won by the American forces—both on land and sea—will go down in history as the greatest ever achieved by any nation on earth. The stars and stripes still wave untarnished, and will continue to wave until time shall be no more.

A satirical senator from New England evolved the following lines [illegible] ling a list of nine [illegible] rock, probably, but there is time enough for further reduction. Klondike is coming to be a synonym not of great wealth, but of fabulous promise and slender performance. The index thunders, but the content is anti-climax.

Admiral Montejo was so struck by the conduct of Dewey and his men that he has been moved to say: "One often finds justice in an enemy, superb and noble, more than among one's own compatriots." Americans are steadfast friends and terrible enemies. But vindictiveness is no part of their nature.

W. J. Bryan, at the head of a picked regiment, has enlisted in his country's service and put himself under orders from the man who defeated him for the presidency. The man who puts himself between the guns of foreign foe and the land he loves disarmes criticism and estops inquiry into his motives.

Imperial Rome had its decline and fall. The Dutch republic [illegible] to be shattered. And the mighty Spanish empire, whose rule was once world-wide, is crumbling to its foundations. Its Gibbon or its Motley may begin to write. The materials are at hand. The story will soon be told.

General Correa proposes to settle the war by letting the Cubans vote as to whether Spanish control there shall cease. One so utterly wanting in the sense of humor presents a pathetic spectacle to the nations.

Two days' fighting near Santiago cost [illegible] used 5,000,000 cartridges. The supply of ammunition among the Spaniards [illegible] Cuba is one of their serious problems.

The annexation of Hawaii by this country was a foregone conclusion abroad. Foreign papers hardly make a reference to the matter, and none has offered an objection.

The illustrated supposition number of the Independence West Side, printed in two colors, is on our table. It is a fine number and reflects credit upon its publishers.

A Little Nonsense.

When little Herman first saw his twin brothers he looked at them a moment and then, "Mamma did you send for samples?"

Now that summer is upon us
Let us keep a primise true
Not to ask of one another
"Is it hot enough for you?"

The latest advertising novelty read thus:

Customer of mine.

They say in the fight at Manila,
That the Spaniards could not do a turn,
Because they were lacking in vessels;
Still, it seems they had warships to burn.

There is a wise injuction in the Bible on the shelf.
That we should love our neighbor even as we love ourself,
But when he has an old cornet and blows wild spasms through it,
It's mighty hard to do it, Lord, it's mighty hard to do it.

Spain paid $80,000 to send Camara through the Suez canal and $80,000 to get him back again. Had Camara gone on to meet Dewey, Spain would nevermore have to pay canal charges for the fleet.
