Sir Arthur Sullivan, the musician, has invented the "Sullivan safety shaft," a device to be attached to carriages to save lives in case of runaway or similar accidents, by releasing the horse from the carriage. The invention, which is to be put on the market at once, is primarily due to the death of the late Countess of Lathom, which filled Sir Arthur with a desire to prevent similar catastrophes.

"Recently, after the Rock Island wreck at Vandal," says the Kansas City Journal, "Dr. G. H. Kittle, of Moonbridge, Mo., put in a claim against the railroad for $1,322 on account of gold lost. The company thought it unreasonable that a country dentist should be getting so much gold at one shipment, and so it combated the claim. But Dr. Kittle proved his gold conclusively, and the company paid over the full amount." The gold used in dentistry in the United States last year was valued at $600,000.

BUSINESS IN ALASKA.

Suber Development Takes the Place of the Mad Rush—New Discoveries Being Made.

Captain Dwight Hunt, with two companions, has been in Haines this week, outfitting for a prospecting tour in the Porcupine mining district, says the Porcupine Quill. Captain Hunt and party represent an extensive company, known as the Jack Crawford (post and scout) party that went to the Hootallina last season over the Drea route, equipped with dredgers, and who have been unsuccessful in the Yukon and are trying the present season to retrieve their ill luck by operating in the Atlin and Forty-Mile diggings in the Yukon. Attracted by favorable reports from the Porcupine district, the manager of the company, Henry M. Wallace, a prominent lawyer of Ann Arbor, Mich., placed a detail of operators under charge of Captain Hunt, who is an experienced prospector, and sent them here to present intelligent examination of the quartz and placer claims in American Alaska in this vicinity. They are also going to give special examination of the hydraulic propositions which are reported favorable. In event they are successful in their search, they will bring in a large outfit this season of modern hydraulic machinery and permanently establish the headquarters of the company—which have a large capital at their control—under the State and Stripes, and abandon the Northwest Territory propositions, when they are wrothly excused by unjust discriminations and exactions. The party will be ready to start early next week, and are now getting their boats and outfit over the trail to the Chilkoot river.

Excitement Runs High.
Mr. Cole, the mail agent for Porcupine City, brought down on his last trip a small pile of gold dust taken from claim No. 1 above Discovery, on Porcupine creek. It was the partial output of the first washout by the use of a sluiceway on that claim, and was sold to Mr. McKibben for $23. Mr. Cole says the miners on McKibben and Porcupine creeks are just beginning to take out gold, and the field soon will astonish the nation. The water is quite high, and only the elevated rim-rock can be worked, but as the work progresses the claims are growing richer, and the water is running high and daily arrivals of prospectors are large.

A Stampede Expected.
Since the arrival of samples of coarse gold from the placer mines on the Porcupine and McKibben diggings, the mine of doubt that have been thrown over that district by the "gubstakers" who have done no active work except to hang around the camp, "waiting for something to turn up," have disappeared, and a feeling of confidence established. In fact, nothing but the best of news is being brought in daily, and it developments continue as they are now going on there will be a genuine stampede inside of six weeks.

Large Cannery Destroyed.
Mr. D. J. Mann's cannery on Seal Island, B. C., was completely destroyed by fire. The cannery was one of the largest on the North Arm, and generally had the largest pack for that branch of the river. The cannery was fully equipped with everything necessary for the season's work and all the nets were hanging in readiness to be taken out for the season's run. The loss on the cannery, stock of cans, machinery, etc., is estimated at $65,000, which there was only $45,000 insurance.

Struck a Quartz Ledge.
William Estinghouse, of California, who has been prospecting along the Chilkoot river for the past four months, struck a ledge of quartz about four miles from Haines. His discovery covers a ledge five feet between walls, and evidently carries a large per cent of copper and gold. Mr. Estinghouse has followed mining for several years in Alaska and California, and is satisfied that his discovery possesses great wealth and will take immediate steps to develop it.

New Alaska City.
Jim McCloskey, of the Arctic, has returned from the Ketchikan mining district, which he reports as a promising district. "Ketchikan," says Jim, "is going to be quite a city, as it already has one large store and about 40 houses. The townsite is being surveyed and the prospectors are flocking in by the dozens. One noticeable feature of the district is the copper-stained ore, nearly every sample coming from that district being literally covered with the stain."

Great Racing Event.
Saturday, July 1, the trotting and running races commenced at the Irving ton track, Portland, and will continue until July 8. Judging by the horses that have already been entered for the different events, it ought to prove a success in every way. Opening day, ladies will be admitted to the track and grandstand free of charge. On all other days 25 cents admission will be charged. This includes a seat in the grandstand. The admission fee for gentlemen on all racing days, including grandstand, will be 50 cents. Good racing and popular prices will undoubtedly prove great drawing cards.

Peacock Copper Prospect.
Mr. Sheldon brought to Haines' Mission several fine specimens of quartz taken from a ledge near town. The specimens were highly crystallized with peacock copper and other mineral which resembled gold. The specimens attracted a great deal of attention and favorable comment from experts. The vein his samples were taken from is about eight inches in width, with good prospects of growing wider as he proceeds with development work.

Death in the Rapids.
The Klondike rush of 1898 has already had its list of dead to be recorded. Frank Kane, hotel man, of Douglas Island, and Charles Mordt, of the Hotel Lindemann, Drea trail, while trying to cross Bennett in a Peterebo canoe, were captured and drowned.

Fresh Meat Famine.
A fresh meat famine existed at Haines the front end of last week. A like condition of affairs in the market is reported as existing at Skagway by reason of the nonarrival of expected beef cattle.

THIS LITTLE WOMAN O' MINE.

After while he rose to his feet. She rose, too, and stood before him, looking into his eyes as though she would read his soul. A wild desire to crush her in his arms took possession of him, and the finger-tails bit into the palms of his clenched hands.

"Must you go?" she whispered, drawing nearer to him.
"I have no choice," he said, again.
"You want money," she continued; "well, I am rich."
He did not reply.

"Would you do something for me?"
"Yes," he said, simply; "I would give my life for you."
Her eyes dropped, and a delicious color crept into her cheeks.
"Well, before you go, do me a favor, Marry me."
He did.—St. Paul's.

TRACING SUICIDE.

Believed that Unsuitable Diet Has an Injurious Effect.
Dr. Haig is of the opinion that suicide may be traced to error in diet, the error being the eating of meat, the drinking of beer and of tea and the smoking of tobacco. His facts all fall comfortably into their places in support of his hypothesis. Are there not more suicides among men than among women, and do not men consume more meat, more beer and more tobacco than the women? Again, suicide is more common in England than in Scotland, not apparently because the Scotch are a more canny race, but because the English eat more meat and drink more beer, while the Scotch eat less meat and drink less beer.

A Boy's Love.
MRS. CARRUTHERS flushed slightly as she read the name on the postcard. "I will see him here, Jane," she said, with studied calmness, "and remember, please, that I am not at home to any one for the next hour."

She nestled down on her settee, pillow the shimmering gold of her head against its cushions, and waited. She was glad he had come. Her thoughts traveled back to their first meeting that day on the front at Brighton, and she smiled as she recalled the quest of wind that caught her handkerchief, a scented scrap of lace and cambric, and carried it fluttering to his feet. He was young, a mere boy in fact, and singularly handsome, and he actually blushed as he restored the trifle. There was something frank and fresh about him—few of her men friends ever blushed—and her tenderness were sufficiently Bohemian to render more formal introduction unnecessary before the week was out he had lunched and dined at her hotel. Time had flown for her since then; bright summer days spent drifting among the upper reaches of the Thames, with the heat of the afternoon lazed away in some shady backwater; morning drives to some old-world retreat among the Surrey hills; afternoons on the lawns at Hurlingham, strolling, talking, tea drinking among the smartest in the land, with the band of the Guards crashing out the masterpieces of great German composers, interspersed with melodies from the Casino. They had been friends, nothing more, but each day had brought a fresh delight, and she had been happy. Now it was to end; he had come to say, "Good-by."

"It seems almost like a dream," she murmured; "I wonder what I shall do without him?"
The hangings swayed aside, and the boy advanced with outstretched hand. She smiled and gave him hers without rising.

"Sit down," she said, "and have some coffee, unless you prefer something stronger."
"Coffee, thank you," he answered, dropping into a chair beside her.
She poured some out and handed it to him, together with a tiny box of tortoise-shell and silver. He laughed softly as he opened it and saw a row of miniature cigarettes.

"Ah! so you indulge, it appears. How often?"
"Oh, sometimes?"
"And I haven't known it until this moment! Will you join me now?"—offering the case.

"No, thank you; I prefer to see you smoke. There is a match beside you."
He lit one of the cigarettes and puffed away in silence, until a blue haze had gathered about his head. Then he looked across at her. "I am going abroad," he said, abruptly. "Are you surprised?"

"Assuming that you mean some horrible trope," he nodded—"yes, I am. I suppose it means the loss of everything that has made your life pleasant in the past—yes? and the gain of what?"
"Nothing."
"Then why go?"

She leaned back, clasping her hands behind her head, and her sleeves, falling, disclosed arms as smooth and white as ivory. Their glances met and she asked again, "Why go?"
"Because I have no choice," he answered. "Look here, Madge, we've been friends, jolly good friends, and God only knows how I shall get on without you; I will be perfectly frank, and tell you just how it stands. My father, as you know, was a country parson, and I have seen little so far; school, Sandhurst, an outlandish depot in the west of Ireland, and—town."

"Do you want to go?"
"One cannot always do what one wants."
She shrugged her shoulders beneath the billow lace and muslin of her demitoyette, and there was another pause.

"How strange it will seem when you have gone—I shall feel quite lost by myself." She spoke softly, in a tone almost of soliloquy, watching him closely to see the effect of her words. He made no reply, and she went on: "When one has so few friends, it is hard to lose them—the places are so hard to fill." He winced at that, and a momentary gleam flashed in her eyes.

"I will see strange," she repeated; "I wonder if you will ever think of me—often, I mean?"
"I hope not," he replied; "I want to forget you."

That was all she wanted; the simple directness of the answer conveyed more to her than any outburst of passion could have done. The rest was easy.

EMBARRASSED HIS FATHER.

A gentleman recently visited a new district police station and was shown over the building by the officer in charge. He related the circumstances of his visit at home in the hearing of his youngest son, a little fellow four years of age. A few weeks later father and son were traveling by rail to a town some miles distant, when just before reaching their destination the train pulled up within sight of a large, gloomy-looking building. The son inquired what place it was, and on being informed that it was the county jail he embarrassed the father and made the other occupants of the carriage look suspicious by asking: "Was that the jail you was in, father?"—Chicago Chronicle.

Beware of Quackery for Catarrh That Contains Mercury.
As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the system when entering it through the mucous surface, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is far too great to be trifled with. Giants of Patagonia.
The tribes to the east of the Cordilleras, in southern Patagonia, belong to Araucanian stock, and are a superior race. The Tehuelches—as they call themselves—of southern and eastern Patagonia are the people whose unusual stature gave rise to the fables of the early days to the effect that the natives of this region were giants averaging nine to ten feet in height. It is a fact that they are the tallest human beings in the world, the men averaging but slightly less than six feet, while individuals of four to six inches above that mark are not uncommon. They are in reality by no means savages, but somewhat civilized barbarians. They are almost unacquainted with the use of firearms, notwithstanding some contact with the whites, but they have plenty of horses and dogs.

Unsurpassed hunters, they capture the guanaco and the rheas, or South American ostrich, and from the skins of these and other animals they make clothes and coverings for their tents. They make beautiful "capotes," or mantles, of furs and feathers which are highly prized by Europeans, and find a ready market, most of the proceeds being spent for bad whisky, which is brought into the country in quantities.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Queen's Splendid Memory.
A remarkable instance of the excellence of her majesty's memory was given a few days ago. A copy of the memoir of the late Thomas Best Jervis of the Bombay engineers was presented to the Queen at Clivedon by the author, who is conservator of the museum at Turin. Her majesty expressed her pleasure at the presentation, and mentioned having seen the model of Sebastopol made by Colonel Jervis, and exhibited by him at the war office as far back as 1855.—London Telegraph.

CRITICAL PERIODS

In Woman's Life Are Made Dangerous by Pelvic Catarrh.

Mrs. Mathilde Richter, Doniphan, Neb., says: "I suffered from catarrh for many years, but since I have been taking Ferru-na I feel strong and well. I would advise all people to try Ferru-na. As I used Ferru-na and Man-a-lin while I was passing through the change of life, I am positively convinced your beneficial remedies have relieved me from all my ills."

Ferru-na has raised more women from beds of sickness and set them to work again than any other remedy. Pelvic catarrh is the bane of womanhood. Ferru-na is the bane of catarrh in all forms and stages. Mrs. Col. Hamilton, Columbus, O., says: "I recommend Ferru-na to women, believing it to be especially beneficial to them."
