In 1790 when the first census was taken of this country, the center of population was twenty-three miles east of Baltimore. The whole country then had a less number of people than New York city has today. In 1810 the center was near Washington; it reached West Virginia in 1850, Ohio in 1850, and in 1890 the last census, it was in Decatur county, Ind., near the Ohio boundary. The government estimate of the present population of the United States, exclusive of countries over which its sovereignty has been extended, is 75,000,000, and all sections of the country have participated, though not equally, in the growth of population since 1890, when it was 52,000,000.—Ex.

Some of our rich corporations, notably Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express and the Western Union Telegraph Co. continue to flaunt in the face of the public the fact that they are so unpatriotic as to refuse to pay the war tax on telegrams and express packages. Instead of making a charge for their services and themselves affixing, as they should do, the necessary stamps they instruct their agents to collect the revenue stamp from the customer. This is an unpleasant duty for the agent, and in many cases the stamp comes directly out of the agent's pocket. This is small business for a rich corporation.—West Side.

The following letter was picked up on the street a few days ago and is awaiting indentification: My darling Peggy:—I met you last night but you never came! I'll meet you again to night whether you come or whether you stay away If I am there first, I'll write my name on the gate to tell you of it, and if you get there first be sure and rub it out darling, and no one will be the wiser. I'll never fail to be at the trysting place, Peggy, for I can't keep away from the spot where you are, whether you're there or not. Your own dear Dick.

Evidently the administration does not expect that it will be an altogether easy task to recruit 15,000 men needed for the volunteer regiments which are to be sent to the Philippines. The general orders issued for enlistment waive the citizenship and educational qualifications which have been required of those seeking to enlist in the regular army, but the standards of physical health are not to be relaxed, a wise precaution in view of the climatic conditions to which the troops will be exposed.

A Wilhelm, of Monroe, has purchased the Harrisburg flouring mills and will proceed at once to enlarge it. This is a small mill but Mr. Wilhelm will add to it by removing one of his mills from Monroe which will make the capacity of the mill about 100 barrel per day. The Harrisburg mill has been closed for some time owing to financial difficulties and its speedy opening with increased facilities has caused much rejoicing in that city.

The Oregon State Fair, to be held at Salem this year is expected to be one of the finest ever held in the state. A magnificent display of stock machinery manufactures and products will be on exhibition. The State Board of Agriculture have left nothing undone to make the fair of 1899 a complete success. The exhibition will commence on Sept 15th and end Sept. 22d.

More money will be put into circulation by the hop growers this year than ever before in the history of the industry in the state. This is certain from the large crop that is to be gathered and the high wages that will have to be paid to secure laborers to save it. Hop picking is something that is both a source of pleasure and profit to a large number of our people.—Corvallis Union.

Mrs. Brobst, wife of a Chicago clergyman, has filed formal charges against him, accusing him of "fraud dishonesty, cruelty, profanity, malice, libel, unnatural conduct, viciousness and falsifying." She thinks this constitutes "conduct unbecoming a minister and a gentleman." It certainly looks a little that way.

The Rev. W. B. Costley, of Stockbridge, Ga., while attending to his pastoral duties at Ellenwood, that state, was attacked by cholera morbus. He says: "By chance I happened to get hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I think it was the means of saving my life. It relieved me at once." FRANK BARTU.

The Oregon Fire Relief Association, of McMinnville, through its representative, has so far refused to pay any of the $700 insurance held by Dr. T. R. Chapman on his recently destroyed property near Monroe. It is asserted by the company that fraud is being used in the case to get the insurance money and from all appearance it is not likely that the matter will end soon.

Not every man has Robert G. Ingersoll's good fortune, for his oftexpressed wish was realized and death came to him "painlessly and with out warning." He was one of the few men who found it profitable to be wicked, his income from his ectures having been about $100,000 a year.

Anecdote of the Late Mr. Vanderbilt.

A retired newspaper man tells of a pleasing experience with Mr. Vanderbilt.

"I went to interview Mr. V.," he says, "and the big man was smilingly silent.

"'Surely you wouldn't hinder a newspaper man making a few dollars,' I said to him facetiously. 'A talk from you is worth a great deal; I made a handsome sum out of my first interview with you.'

"'Well, by George, I like a man who can make money out of me,' said the railway king. 'It takes a smart man to do it; fire away with your questions.'"

The Chicago & Northwestern railroad employs on its entire system 21,092 people at average daily wages of $1.96; the Chicago Great Western, 2,620 at average daily wages of $1.84; the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern, 3,026 at average wages of $1.85; the Rock Island, 10,519 at average wages of $1.97; the Iowa Central, 1,375 at average wages of $1.75; the Des Moines, Northern & Western at average wages of $1.68; the Burlington, 17,996 at average wages of $1.77; the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, 20,245 at average daily wages of $1.93.

—Insufficient Data.—"You are an expert, are you not?" said the caller. "Yes, sir." "Well, I wish you would take these two papers and tell me whether they were written by the same person." "Is it a matter of litigation?" "Very possibly." "Then it would be really impossible for me to comply with your request; not until I have learned upon which side I have been retained."—Washington Star.

The Jeffrey & Moore threshing outfit met with quite an accident while passing through Scio last Saturday. One of the axels of the separator broke when near the M. E. church, and a new one had to be put in. This caused a loss of about four hours and a half of valuable time.

Young Bros. who purchased the A. Glass farm, just south of town, raised 264 bushels of oats on fo r acres of ground this season, and were fortunate enough to get their entire crop threshed before the rain. An average of 66 bushels of oats per acre is a pretty good yield for Oregon.

Frank Crawford, one of the leading athletes of the O. A. C. and state died at Corvallis Sunday morning of peritonitis, after an illness of only a week. He had a record of 10 1 5 seconds for 100 yards and was to have run in the contest at Astoria during the regatta, under the O. A. C. colors.

J. S. Morris last Saturday completed the work of graveling the streets on the south side from Main street to the eastern limits of the city, and the work was done in first-class shape, too. The center of the street was thrown up and ample drainage left on either side, and a strip about 20 feet wide will be graveled.

A native merchant of Manila while undergoing his last illness expressed a desire to have one of those beautiful American tunes played at his funeral. He could not give its name but a friend knew what he wanted, and so the funeral passed on to the cemetery, the band playing "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

The eight-year-old son of G. W. Vaughn, living in Albany, was drowned in the race leading to the Albany Iron works, Tuesday afternoon. The boy, in company with several others, playing near the race when he missed his footing and fell in, and before the alarm was given and he was taken out of the water life was extinct.

Albany is loud in praising her citizens for their liberality in raising the $12,000 subsidy for the big Curtiss saw mill. The mill complete to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 and certainly means a good deal for Albny. It will be located near the S. P. depot, and will get its logs from the Santiam country and they will be delivered to the mill by a special train service on the C. & E. railroad. It will be a great industry for Albany.

Last Friday morning while cleaning the chain on his bicycle W. D. Cyrus caught the index finger of his right hand in the chain and the flesh on the end of the finger was removed with neatness and dispatch He called upon Dr Prill and had the injury dressed, and is now getting along very well. Those bicycle chains fit pretty tight on the sprocket.

Joseph Young has an exhibition at R. Sheltons real estate office two stalks of tobacco, which shows a very prolific growth. One of the stalks is genuine Havana, the seed having been procured by Mr. Young from Havana, Cuba, last winter. If anyone doubts that tobacco can be successfully raised in Oregon they should call and see that raised by Mr. Young.

Information gained from various sources leads us to believe that the Roaring river lumber flume, of which we spoke some time ago, will be under construction before many weeks, and that it will be in active operation within a few months. The scheme is a good one and is about the only successful way to bring the lumber out of the mountains in that and other localities where sufficient water can be had to operate a flume.

Those of our subscribers who wish to bring us wood on subscription should do so at once so that we may know just how much we will have for the coming winter. There are several who wish to pay their subscription in wood for the coming winter, so bring it along, and if your neighbor does not take the paper tell him to bring us in a load of good wood and we will put his name on our list for one year.

Saturday last Wm. McDonald met with an accident with his new Harvester King binder, breaking the master wheel of the critter, and it required the services of "Judd Barnes and Pete McDonald all day Sunday to put it in shape for action. It is not often that our worthy smiths will give up their day of rest but this was a case where their services would possibly mean the saving of a good many dollars worth of crops.

A philosopher soliloquizes in this style: A poor man buys a horse from a stranger which turns out to be stolen. The rightful owner comes along proves his property and takes his animal. Again: A rich man buys a note of hand from a stranger. It turns out that the note was obtained by fraud. The man who made the note comes along and is compelled to pay the note on the grounds that it is in the hands of an innocent purchaser. Why is this difference? Was not the man who purchased the horse an innocent purchaser too?"

While preparing the morning meal at the farm home of O. M. Bilyeu, a few miles east of Scio yesterday morning, the little two year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Bilyeu was quite seriously burned with hot grease. A pan half full of hot grease was in some manner spilt, and the contents struck the child on the top of the head, badly burning the right side of its face and head, also its right shoulder and hand. Dr. Prill was immediately summoned and did all that he could to relieve the sufferings of the little one, but as the hot liquid burned deep it will be some time before the results of the injury will be known.

The past week has been an exceptional one for Oregon. Sunday rain began falling, and it has kept it up almost all the time since. There is a good deal of grain in the stock, and this fact causes our farmers to look pretty gloomy, and well they may, as it is an unpleasant sight to see one's years work lying out in the rain with no chance to save it as long as the rain kept falling. Yesterday the prospect for a change was better, and should the weather clear up so that threshing could be commenced Saturday the grain will all be saved. There should be a good deal of caution used in saving the grain, and none should be threshed until it is thoroughly dry. If the grain is threshed while yet damp it will be difficult to save it.

There was just a little excitement in the old town Tuesday evening. It was all occasioned by the arrest of a man for using profane language on the street. It seems from the facts brought out that one A. F. Tulloch was slightly under the influence of real liquor and used considerable profanity, to properly impress his hearers as to his fighting qualities. He was taken before Recorder Shelton and after due trial was fined $5, which was paid and he was again set at liberty. His arrest and conviction call to mind the fact that language just as bad as he indulged in is heard almost every day on the streets of our city and used by none other than boys who live here and whose parents are residents of the town. There is far too much of such talk, and several of our citizens have decided to report every such case that comes to their knowledge, and it is the opinion of many that an example or two will do much to check the obscene and profane language that is used on the streets every day.

Last Saturday Marshal Young received telephone instructions to arrest and hold Wayne Starr, a young man who lives with his parents near Dusty, and who was supposed to be in this city, having left Corvallis that morning on a wheel for Scio. Mr. Young soon learned that the young man had been here but had gone up to Mr. Ray's, near Jordan. A constable from Corvallis arrived about noon, and in company with Marshal Young drove up to Mr. Ray's place and took the young man in charge. He was arrested for the larceny of a bicycle lamp, but claimed that he had purchased the lamp from a stranger the evening previous for 75 cents, and, as he is a man who has heretofore borne a good reputation his story is generally believed here. He is well known here and his friends are hoping that he may be innocent of the crime charged against him. He had the lamp on his wheel at the time of his arrest, and rode the wheel to Scio in front of the officers, who were in the buggy. He had no desire to get away, but was anxious to go back to Corvallis and clear himself of the charge.

Barnes of this city and C. S. Harnish, visited Clear lake, and while there this same Billy killed a fine five pointer, and the crowd landed and salted about seven gallons of just about the finest trout that we ever gazed upon. Mr. Brenner is known as a very generous hearted individual, and to prove his generosity he presented us with a half dozen of the speckled beauties, one of which measured an even 18 inches in length, and for this kind rememberance he has our hearty thanks.

Mrs. Jane Beeler, who lived south of Lebanon, died Saturday, August 12, and her remains were laid to rest in the Providence cemetery Sunday last. She was an aunt of A. T. Powell, of this city, and was 93 years of age. Her death removes from our midst another of those honored pioneers whose life work was to do good and make others happy.

Fred Daley is not a success as a swift mail carrier. Last Monday morning he drove the mail hack to Munkers and when within about five blocks of the postoffice he broke down and had to bring the mail in by hand. Hereafter when he goes out it will be well for him to take along an extra hack or so, to insure his making connections right on the dot.

Mrs. J. A. Stimson died at her home in Albany at 4:15 p. m. Thursday, of cancer of the stomach. The deceased was a pioneer resident of Oregon and was held in the highest esteem by all. She as one of those noble old ladies whose ear was open to the cry of distress and her home was noted for its lavish hospitality. She leaves four sons and three daughters and hosts of friends to regret her loss.

The ends of the earth are being secured for cattle. A recent phase in the search was the arrival at Yaquina bay of a small steamer from Humbolt with several hundred head of calves destined for the Montana ranges. The buyer passed through Corvallis the other day enroute to Albany and Portland to make arrangements to carry his calves to their destination by rail If suitable terms cannot be secured, he will drive. The calves came from the dairy region in the western slopes of the coast range of Northern California.—Corvallis Times.

Here is a mathematical novelty. A farmer in India owning seventeen elephants, died—and in his will gave the elephants to his three sons; to the first one, one-half, to the second, one-third, and to the third, one ninth. As the elephant could not be divided that way the three sons were in a quandary when a neighbor came to the rescue and said, "I own one elephant, which I will put with yours, making 18 in all. So he divided them:—½ of 18 equals 9; ⅓ of 18 equals 6; and 1-9 of 18 equals 2; total 17. Each son now had his full allotment, and it was found that one elephant remained, which of course belonged to the neighbor farmer. Where is the "catch" in the problem?

COLD WEATHER IN AFRICA.

Natives Are Sometimes Frozen to Death in Some Parts of the Continent.

"In spite of all that has been written lately about the Transvaal republic, most people have an utterly mistaken idea about it," said Albert Gerard Thiers, the tenor, who is well acquainted with it, the other day. "Most people, I find, think that any spot in Africa is torrid and terrifically hot at all times, whereas, in reality, many of the nights, and particularly in June, are very cold, and it takes all the rugs and blankets that one possesses to keep him warm.

"Though the midday sun is almost as warm as any summer day," the tenor went on, "one needs to be well provided with covering if he proposes to pass the night on the veldt. To give you some idea of the cold of the plains at night, I may tell you that a few winters ago several natives on their way to the fields were frozen stiff on the road from Pretoria to Potchefstroom.

"Several of our party one day started from Bloemfontein for Pretoria, where the shooting was particularly good, taking with us a couple of boys to carry our traps, which consisted of a change of linen, or, rather, flannels, a pair of blankets each, the cooking utensils and a spare gun. We had for our companion a young man whom we had met a few days previous to our departure—a young Scotchman, but lately arrived in the country.

"Starting about two o'clock in the afternoon, we walked briskly, with occasional halts for coffee, until about ten o'clock at night, when the moon shone out in full, and we decided to turn in for the night. The wind was already blowing pretty fresh, and we looked about for a place in the veldt where the ant hills were the thickest, so that we could set fire to two of them to heat our kettles and keep us warm during the bivouac. After having a cup of coffee and sitting around the fire until thoroughly warmed, our party slipped off their boots, and, putting them under our heads for pillows, pulled our blankets over our heads and feet and were soon fast asleep, imagining, of course, the Scotchman would do the same.
