While our county commissioners are looking for new furniture and fixtures for our Linn county court house some additions to the regular office supplies may be worthy of their attention. In this line we quote the following from the St. Helens mist to show that other counties are looking to facilitating the office work with a view to a two-fold economy.

Eugene City has a $1075 damage suit on her hands caused by an unsafe sidewalk.

The July number of the Spokesman Review has reached our table. Artistically it is of high rank. It contains given the history in brief of many of the richest mining properties of the great northwest, and the text is profusely illustrated with photogravure reproductions which are realistic and show the rugged nature of the country in which the wealth is buried and the different methods by which it is brought to light. It also shows how the great northwestern cities almost all built in a day. How in a few short years or months even what was a wilderness became a magnificent city. It is worthy a place in the library of every home.

If the statements made by the press of the state can be believed, the damage done by rain during harvest has not proven nearly so heavy as was feared. Much of the grain which has been injured receiving more hurt from being thrashed while wet than from any other cause, but very little which was properly dried before thrashing being seriously injured. If the new crop is thoroughly dried and cleaned nearly all will pass as marketable though possibly subject to a slight dockage according to weight. Tests go to show that grain which was properly ripened before being cut and was afterward carefully handled and thoroughly dried before thrashing is not injured to any appreciable extent.

Last winter an Oregon City firm made a lot of fish poles out of arrowwood which grows plentifully in the timbered regions of the State. The work was done by hand and the rods were jointed and finished in fine style and sold readily at fair prices. Poles made from arrowwood will stand a strain which will break bamboo or other wood poles. The firm has received so many inquiries regarding the poles and their ability to supply the trade that they are contemplating putting in machinery and engaging in the manufacture of arrowwood poles on an extensive scale says the Oregonian. Thus slowly but surely the varied resources of Oregon are being developed and new and profitable industries built up which tend to enrich our people and furnish them with home made goods of the best quality.

While our county commissioners are looking for new furniture and fixtures for our Linn county court house some additions to the regular office supplies may be worthy of their attention. In this line we quote the following from the St. Helens mist to show that other counties are looking to facilitating the office work with a view to a two-fold economy.

A town, unlike a city, is no place to foster jealousy and nourish contentions. All should lean to know that whatever will conduce to the welfare of a town cannot injure her citizens. The disposition made manifest by her citizens point to her downfall or rise. Harmony among the people of a community is as necessary to their success as is air to sustain.—Witchman.

WAR REMINISCENCES

RECOLLECTIONS OF AN OLD SOLDIER

In a day or two we returned to Jefferson City when the teamsters were supplied with wagons and mules, and they certainly must have been supplied with a certain amount of profanity, there seemed to be a certain amount of affinity between army mules and profanity, soldiers as a class could swear enough for any ordinary use, but the army teamster could give him odds and come under the wire at least a length ahead.

When we were bled during the winter, one of the runners being General Jim Lane had offered to take the regiment and his outfit to the mouth of the "Boone howl," but the colonel refused the proposition. We learned, however, at a later date that it was not in order for a general of a lower order to stipulate what troops he would command and that it was not in order for a general of a lower order to stipulate what troops he would command and that it was not in order for a general of a lower order to stipulate what troops he would command.

until we reached St. Charles, on the west shore of the Mississippi river, where we embarked and were carried down to Commerce and marched across the county to New Madrid. Here we first heard the boom of artillery, one shot was fired at us, but being too far away it failed to reach us, consequently it did not dampen our ardor to any very great extent.

We were reinforced by the 11th Missouri Infantry, the 2nd Wisconsin Infantry, the 3rd Minnesota Infantry, and the 2nd Iowa battery. The whole commanded by Colonel Plummer of the 11th Missouri. The brigade as thus formed remained in tact with the exception of the 26th Ill., during our term of service, and was generally known as the "Eagle brigade" greatly attached to one another. The 11th Missouri was considered the best fighters in the brigade by all the other regiments and we all thought the 2nd Iowa battery had as good or better staying qualities as any other battery in the west.
