A FEW FARM NOTES

A. M. Bunce of Wyoming, is buying a car load of heavy horses at Heppner, Oregon, to take back East and is paying $75 to $85 a head.

The Portland Kennel Club has set the date of April 18 for a bench show in that city. The sum of $500 will be raised to insure payment of all prizes.

It is a whole lot better to make the mistake of too much clover seed than too little. An exchange gives this advice: "Don't insure the quantity with the pocketbook."

J. B. Haggin will ship at least 200 yearlings to England this year and dispose of them there at public sale. In addition to those about the same number will be sold in New York.

It is time the unused horse was getting accustomed to a little work, increasing it gradually so as not to jump into it all at once. What is good for the horse will also be good for the man.

It is not enough to know that seed will sprout. It should grow and make a strong plant. This is the object of seed. The really good farmer will see that he has strong seed of all kinds.

The man who falls in with every new fad, without studying its merits is like the man who joins the procession and keeps up with it when it is on the wrong road. Leave the procession when it turns up the wrong street.

As a rule the man who will have the office is the man who is elected road superintendent. It is too bad that a really good man is not always elected to this office. Sometimes there is need for a man better than for the place than usually fills it.

Clover is good for so many things that it is a mystery to me that it is not more generally grown on farms. Its worth is known and appreciated by entirely too few people. The up-to-date poultryman knows the value of clover as a poultry feed.—Lowa Homestead.

Bad roads are a great drawback to rural life, for it generally occurs that good roads are most needed when they are bad. Where the best roads are found the farms look thrifty, the buildings are fine and everything corresponds with the good condition of the roads.

The dairyman who has not yet learned to make the same quality of butter all the time has more to learn. The miller who cannot make the same grade of flour all the time out of a certain grade of wheat is not a good miller. Make a good quality of butter and sell it for what it is worth.

Fourteen double decked cars containing 3000 head of sheep were started over the road from The Dalles to St. Paul last week. They were shipped by Jno. Little of Antelope, and will go via the Northern Pacific. This is the first of the many large shipments which will leave this place during the spring and summer.—Mountaineer.

"The most graceful of domestic animals is the cat, while the most awkward bird is the duck," says an observer of Nature; but it won't do to use these facts for a basis if you want to call a woman pet names.

Halter break the colts when a few days old, and break them early in life to harness, as they are easier handled when young. The better care and feed they get the first two years especially the first, the better animals you will make of them. Feed and care are everything in developing a colt.

Henry Myer has a new bull pup, and it is quite an intelligent chap, too. He's the making of a fine dog, and when he gets "big" he will undoubtedly wallow any dog in the surrounding country. He will be under the direction of Pete McDonald and Frank Irvine, who are both dog trainers of considerable note.

This is the season of the year when the beescentinals have plenty to occupy their time, and their work will continue until the old plows are laid away for fall plowing. But between now and fall there will doubtless be a few wagon fires that will have grown to big for the rest of the wheel, and it always takes a blacksmith to make them fit.

The Oregon Telephone company are figuring a little on extending their line from this city up the Santiam as far as Berry of Detroit. A telephone line up in that section of the country would undoubtedly be good paying property, as telegraph facilities are not very extensive and the lumbering business, up that way is sufficient to justify the construction of the line.

W. J. Hadley's store, at Marion, was broken into Sunday night, and $3 or $4 which was left in the money drawer was stolen. Entrance to the store was effected by croaking a window, and evidence points very strongly to the work being done by someone who lives in that locality probably by some boys, who had use for a few dollars, and were too indolent to work and earn it.

We know of one farmer up in Linn county who has rented his grain land and is devoting his time exclusively to the poultry business, with the aid of incubators and brooders. He expects to make more money on his ten or fifteen acres which he reserves in the poultry business, than he formerly made on his whole farm, and with less drudgery and worry.—Statesman.

It rained Sunday, and when we say it rained we do not refer to a heavy fog. The water came down by the wholesale and by the retail.

full, and for a time it looked as though the whole outfit of clouds were coming down in a heap, and aimed to spread out after they got down. There was a little hail mixed in with it, too, and some thought the fruit buds were in danger, but we have not heard of any serious damage being done. The past three weeks of fine weather were sufficient however, to offset a few rainy days.

T. W. Dilley's little son, who is visiting relatives here, accompanied by his mother, created a good bit of comment last Friday by appearing on the street with a young bicycle. The machine was a regular bicycle, only that it had not got its growth, and was a very small affair. The wheels were about twelve inches in diameter, and the machine was equally as small all over. Mr. Dilley made the whole affair himself, and he certainly shows himself to be a mechanic of the finer type, as the wheel showed expert work, and was a curiosity as well.

This week closes the winter term of school under Prof. Wilson, and on Monday morning Prof. Geddis will assume charge of the school and will teach a two month's term. The teachers in the two other rooms will remain the same, and Prof. Geddis will be retained to teach next winter, if arrangements now made are not changed before that time. The directors are making an effort to bring the school up to a high standard, and when the fall term begins they will likely employ another teacher, making a four all told, and this will add another grade or two, and enable the principal to devote more of his time to high school work. Prof. Geddis has taught the schools in this city before, and gave eminent satisfaction. He is an instructor of great ability, and we are pleased to see him return to our city. Prof. Wilson has had good success with the school, and has labored under many disadvantages. He is in poor health, and it was this fact that led the directors to think that a change was necessary. His contract with the district expires with this week, and the next principal will take up the work where he leaves it. It is the desire of every person in the district to see the schools put on as firm a basis as possible, and brought up to the highest possible standard, and it is going to require an expenditure of considerable money to reach the desired end, but the patrons of the school are anxious that the directors do all in their power to bring about a better condition of affairs, and so expressed themselves at the recent school meeting.

Henry Sell Chickens by the Pound Unless they are Phenomenally Large.

I am paying 8 to 9 cents per pound for chickens, but don't be deceived into thinking that that is a better price than $4 and $5, for it is not, but instead it is from 50 cents to 1.00 dozen less. He who advises you to sell by the pound is working directly for his own profit, and with much gall, for it is so plain.

So, believe me when I tell you that you best sell by the dozen or less your chickens are phenomenally large.

Chickens are sold universally in our market by the dozen, not by the pound.

Ross E. HIBLER.

A Lebanon man tells the following for a fact, which may be told now, as the man is dead. One day a Lebanon man bought a horse from a man at his store, the first one he had ever eaten. After finishing it he threw the peel on the floor. After gazing at it a moment he picked it up and wrapped it in a piece of paper and returned it. "What's all that for?" said the man who sold it. "That horse was my wife and let her see what a banana look like. She never seed one." And the man had an income of several thousand dollars a year.

Ben Irvine, one of the prominent farmers and stockmen of Jordan, is here visiting his daughters, Misses Mattie and Bertha, who are attending Mineral Springs college. Mr. Irvine's live stock includes a good sized flock of Angora goats, which he finds are the most profitable stock for the rancher of the foothills of the valley. He informs us that he and other goat raisers of his part of the county are pooling their money, and he advises those who have goat herds to do the same.—Seasideville correspondent to Lebanon E. A.

Down near Cottage Grove a prosperous farmer had trouble getting his son out of bed mornings to do the chores. The boy had a habit of answering "yes" and going to sleep again. Recently he was particularly anxious to get the young man up for important work, and to make no mistake, called the boy, got the "yes," then said upstairs, "turned the covers down and gave the person there a good spanking. It happened on that night the bird girl had been given the boys room. When the tumbler was over the old man sat down behind the barn and drafted a written apology to the girl.
