

Difficult Digestion

That is dyspepsia. It makes life miserable. Its sufferers eat not because they want to, but simply because they must. They know they are irritable and fretful; but they cannot be otherwise. They complain of a bad taste in the mouth, a tenderness at the pit of the stomach, an uneasy feeling of puffiness, headache, heartburn and what not. The effective remedy, proved by permanent cures of thousands of severe cases, is

Poisoned by Absorption

Through the pores of the skin many poisons are absorbed into the blood, deranging the circulation and affecting the constitution as quickly and seriously as those generated within the system. Just under the skin are innumerable hair-like blood vessels, and connecting these with the skin are millions of small tubes or glands, through which the poison is conveyed to the blood system. During the spring and summer, while the skin is most active and the pores well open, we are much more liable to be affected by Poison Oak and Ivy and other dangerous plants. Workers in brass, copper, lead and zinc have their health impaired and the blood supply poisoned through the absorption of fine particles of these metals and the acids used in polishing and cleaning them. Inhaling the fumes of lead give painters that pallid, waxy appearance of the skin. Barber's Itch is another disease that reaches the blood through the skin, and is a most obstinate one when it becomes firmly fixed in the system. After the poison has reached the blood and been disseminated throughout the system it is too late to resort to local applications. In many cases the blood is affected simultaneously with the appearance of the rash or eruption on the skin, and all efforts should be directed to the purification and building up of the blood. Ugly eruptions and sores will continue to break out in spite of external treatment.

S. S. S. is especially recommended for poisons of this character. So completely does it destroy the effects of the Oak and Ivy that there is no possibility of its reappearance, and it is equally as efficacious in brass or lead poisoning or Barber's Itch; building up and purifying the blood and driving out of the circulation impurities of every kind, and removing every blemish, sore or eruption from the skin. There is no substitute for S. S. S.; it is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known, and the safest and best in all constitutional or blood diseases.

Our Medical Consultation Department.—If you desire any special information or advice about your case, write our physician, explaining your condition, and they will carefully consider what you have to say and you will receive a prompt reply. Our physicians have made a study of blood and skin diseases, and you can have the benefit of their experience and skill without any cost to you whatever. Don't hesitate to write fully about yourself, as nothing you say goes beyond our office. We have a very interesting book on Blood and Skin Diseases, which we will be glad to mail free.

CURED BY PERUNA

Of Nervous Prostration.

John Hancock was the first—Roger Sherman a Jack-of-All-Trades. "John Hancock was the first to sign the declaration," says a writer in New Lippincott, "and his bold, heavy, ink-black signature is a character study in itself. There is dash and fire, frankness and firmness in it, and the tremendous flourish at its close shows ready wit, firm nerve and sure execution. Hancock was Governor of Massachusetts many terms. He left most of his fortune to colleges and for benevolent purposes."

Roger Sherman died in 1793, the same year as Hancock. Shoemaker, surveyor, lawyer, storekeeper, mayor, congressman, judge and supreme judge, senator, member of the committee of declaration and of the boards of war and ordnance, he disproved the old proverb about Jack-of-all-trades by being a success at all. He was sagacious, practical and of quickest wit. Senator Randolph, proud both of his aristocratic birth and of having the blood of the Indian princes, Pocahontas, in his veins, despised Sherman because of his lowly origin. Once when the latter was speaking he interrupted him: "Can the senator from Connecticut tell me," piped he in his shrill, sarcastic voice, "what he did with his leather shoemaker's apron when he came to the senate?" "Quick as a flash came the answer, 'I cut it up to make moccasins for the Indian senator from Virginia!'"

I heard the first "honk" of the season coming from far up in the vast expanse of the blue heaven. For a long time nothing could I see, until at last a tiny speck appeared in the sky as far as the eye could reach, and watching it intently, I saw it grow into the form of a goose that was slowly descending in great spirals.

This bird was followed at regular intervals by others, in little parties of from six to ten.

The leader came down immediately above the Inch, and while she was preparing to alight, there were still small companies evolving themselves from the blue expanse, until at last there must have been some fifteen hundred birds actually on the wing, all in process of descent, and all following one another at regular intervals.

By and by, when the leading geese had settled, the parties at the rear seemed to straggle more, and longer intervals occurred between them; yet they kept coming in all day as I roamed round and about the lake, till by evening, when I disturbed the company, there must have been between two and three thousand geese sitting on the island.

Message for Dyspepsia. A French medical journal cites a number of cases where great and lasting benefits were derived by people suffering from dyspepsia and abdominal diseases from a gentle massage treatment of the abdomen, says Leslie's Weekly. One case mentioned is that of a young man aged 20 years, who for six months had been suffering with his stomach. In spite of varied treatment he was gradually growing worse and looked by one in the last stages of phthisis. He suffered from constipation and insomnia; he was very nervous and was convinced that he was about to die. After instituting the abdominal massage his condition rapidly improved; his abdomen, which had resembled that of a child with meningitis, became supple and daily enlarged. The treatment was not severe nor very special. His pain disappeared, and he was able to digest all that was given to him. The patient gained in six months about sixty-five pounds, which he has not lost since that time, now five years ago.

One Consoling Thought. Illustrating the value of caution in expression, the Hon. John M. Allen, of Mississippi, tells a story of a funeral oration, which he heard delivered by a negro preacher in the South. The habits of the deceased brother had not been irreproachable, and one of his items of waywardness was constant attendance at gay parties, where he whistled, dined, and otherwise dissipated to the great scandal of the worthy pastor of the flock. So, in summing up the case at the funeral, the preacher delivered himself in this wise: "My brethren and sisters, we are here to pay our last sad respects to our departed brother. Some says he was a good man, and some says he was a bad man. Where he has gone to we can't tell, but in our grief we have one consolation, that is—he's dead."

COSTLY MINCE PIES

Minced a Boy's Damage Suit Against a Rail Road Company.

Johnny Foehl ate five mince pies at one sitting, and this little feat cost him exactly $5,000. His suit against the Camden & Suburban Railway Company for that amount for injuries sustained in being pushed from a car was progressing favorably to him yesterday in the Camden Court. Half a dozen doctors had sworn that he was an invalid as the result of the accident, when Willie Brower, one of Johnny's witnesses, in his rambling testimony told of Johnny's love for pies.

Counsel for the trolley company saw a glimmer of hope in this. "Could he eat a whole pie?" was asked of Willie.

"Why, yes, he ate five within a few minutes last week," the boy replied.

The three lawyers who represented Johnny were on their feet in an instant demanding of the court to know what mince pie had to do with Johnny Foehl being injured by a trolley car. They wanted this portion of the testimony stricken out.

"Well," declared counsel for the trolley company, "any boy who can eat five mince pies at one sitting is not very much of an invalid."

The court admitted the mince pie testimony. Having got into the case, the pie remained to a finish.

Counsel for the plaintiff wanted to bring witnesses to prove the pies were small five-cent ones. They were willing to send for a pie to show the jury. The railway company's lawyers conceded that the pies were small, but contended that even so no invalid could eat five of them.

When all the testimony was in the court, relieving the jury, declared that Johnny Foehl had not made out a case. The mince pie testimony had been fatal to it.—Philadelphia North American.

STOCK JUDGING A NEW AND POPULAR COLLEGE COURSE

One of the newest and at the same time most popular courses at the University of Illinois is that in stock judging. It has been established only three years, and there are at present more than 300 students taking it. The course is popular because it leads directly to employment at much more than average salaries, some of the graduates, after taking a course of nine months' duration, securing positions as cattle buyers at the Stock Yards and elsewhere at salaries ranging from $2,000 to $3,000 a year. So great is the interest which has been aroused in cattle judging that a number of Western colleges have formed an intercollegiate stock judging league, and send rival teams to annual contests, the winners being awarded a handsome silver trophy presented by J. A. Spoor, of Chicago. The course of instruction at the University of Illinois is entirely practical. No books are used, the demonstrations being made on the living animals. Once the students have the good and bad points of the different classes of animals firmly fixed in their minds they are set to judging five or six animals in the same ring. Each student grades the animals comparatively, and then the score cards are gone over and corrected by the professor. In this way a good working knowledge of live stock buying is acquired in a few months.
