At that hour it was not known whether the imprisoned men were dead or alive, their signals having ceased after midnight last night. Great difficulty is being encountered in reaching the place where the men are located. The walls of the tunnel are constantly crumbling, not only impeding the work of rescue, but also endangering the lives of the miners who were endeavoring to save their entombed comrades.

Mr. Rockhill, that what are known as the commercial concessions in the protocols were secured. Thus a single staple, namely flour, was placed upon the Chinese free list. In view of the present large market for American flour in China and the enormous prospective demand to follow closer relations, this one concession is regarded as of great value.

wind. Otherwise, today Philadelphia would have witnessed the greatest fire in its history. Several business houses on the south side of Market street were badly scorched, but not seriously burned. Eye witnesses say that the flames spread with remarkable rapidity, owing to the fact that much naphtha, varnish, excelsior and other highly inflammable material was used by the firm. Employees who started down the fire escape in the rear of the building before the flames were visible from the street, were compelled to jump before they had traveled two stories, because of the flames breaking through the windows. The first firemen who arrived devoted their energies entirely to the work of rescue. Nets were spread in the front and rear of the building and some who jumped in were saved in this way.

Scenes Were Horrible.

Two men, one white and one colored, emerged from the fourth story and stood on the fire escape with the flames all around them. The white man danced up and down and appeared to be bereft of his reason. The colored man stood for a few seconds and then jumped to his death below. The white man stood on the fire escape until he was overcome and then fell to his death in the street. There was no fire escape on the front of the building, and all employees rushed madly to the rear.

An employee of Hunt, Wilkinson & Co. made the following statement:

"The fire started in the basement at the bottom of the new freight elevator shaft. Workmen were employed adjusting the mechanical apparatus, it being intended to start the elevator today. The first any of us on the ground floor knew of the fire was when a sheet of flame leaped upward through the shaft. Everyone at once rushed out through the rear.

scramble many were knocked down and 13 injured, three seriously. Of the latter one may die. A number of other persons were bruised or cut but their injuries were slight.

It was about 3:30 o'clock when the first act of "Tennessee's Pardner," and while the polypose was being gotten ready that the flash of flame came that caused the panic.

Many women and children, who mainly composed the audience, made a rush for the door. The panic seized the gallery, and in a moment the occupants were plunging down the stairs or were taking the swifter method of climbing down into the auditorium proper. In their haste many fell, landing on those beneath. Several were badly hurt in this way.

The attaches of the theatre attempted to stop the mad rush. The band played and a number of the stock company danced. This had much effect in quieting those near the stage.

The great rush occurred when the steps came down from the gallery. Here the two crowds met and were packed into space not large enough for half of them. The weaker were soon knocked down and trampled under foot. The crowd literally rolled down the long flight of stairs. As soon as the rush was over the care of the injured began. A big room was converted into a temporary hospital, from which every patrol wagon and ambulance in the city was soon engaged in hauling the wounded to the hospitals or their homes.
