THE TEST

The real true gentry and those who are holding society up to the front line of progress are they who in spite of all lowering conditions are honest and pure in thought and intention. The real gentleman, the real lady—in their presence you think of the high and noble things of life. Home making, honorable business, painting, music inventions, oratory, philosophy, philanthropy—these leave their place in the conversation of nature's elite, and one is not only known by the company he keeps but he is kept pure or otherwise by the company he knows.

The low minded, the dregs of society think but little of the higher things of life. Some are able to accumulate much money but it is generally by trickery, the sale of their virtues or through some chance.

Their pleasure is not in art, unless art approaches vulgarity; music is of no use excepting as an instrument to physical excitement; their conversation is of low things and repulsive to those who love the good the beautiful and the true.

In conversation with a young man recently we were much pleased to learn that he understood and could tell the difference. "Why," said he, "when I talk with some of the young ladies I can't help thinking of low things while with others it is just the opposite, they seem to live in different worlds."

Yes, young readers of the Appeal, here is a test for you and it would be well to apply it to your company at once and if they will not stand the test seek those that will, remembering that while it is right to use all kindly, it is far better to be alone than in bad company.

What are you kicking about? To steal from a thief is no robbery, nobow, and we never knew you to be guilty of writing anything worthy of a credit.

The Marion county officials are in a terrible mix-up, and the end is not in sight. "The county judge is determined to have the books of the several county officers expurgated and the officers are just as determined that he shall not. Judge Scott seems to think he is the whole thing."

Jumped on a Ten Penny Nail.

The little daughter of Mr. J. N. Powell jumped on an inverted rake made of ten penny nails, and thrust one nail entirely through her foot and a second one half way through. Chamberlain's Pain Balm was promptly applied and five minutes later the pain had disappeared and no more suffering was experienced. In three days the child was wearing her shoe as usual and with absolute no discomfort. Mr. Powell is a well known merchant at Forkland, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and heals such injuries without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment.

<SHEARED>

If Roosevelt's administration does not prove a success it will not be from lack of advice.

The fool who has a graft is better off than the man who has brains but doesn't know how to use them.

The Ohio courts have evidenced their belief in the equality of women by ordering one of them to pay alimony.

A man who says "Don't know" is wiser and better off than the man who attempts to convey the impression that he does know.

The quiet man is the exasperating one. You are conscious that, although you are doing all the quarreling, you can't even imagine the cutting things he is thinking of you.

Bernal Wolfard, a fireman, has sued the Southern Pacific Company for $40,000 damages, because of personal injuries received on February 5, 1901, at Snowdon, on the Ashland division. He complains that one of his legs was mashed on that it became necessary to amputate it below the knee, and the other was badly crushed and mangled, and he was bruised and otherwise injured.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now, your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup, bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup. Peery & Peery."

Thoughtlets.

There are some very nice appearing people who have very bad principles. It takes "smooth people" to fool people.

"How to the line" but be careful to get the line in the right place. Don't think for a moment that it's smart to be tricky.

It is not a virtue to yield to evil doers. That is what they want, and the gentle character of the righteous is at fault for much evil. Down with evil with honor.

The correction of wrong should be with kindness. Teachers and parents have you learned this lesson "by heart?"

Men are only great when they square their lives by great principles.

From a G. A. R. Man

"My attack of miller's Asthma was very bad. I was afraid to lie down at night for fear of smothering. I couldn't get my breath. No matter if all the doors and windows in the house were open, it seemed as if there was no air and I must surely smother to death. Mr. W. H. Peery of this city called my attention to Acker's English Remedy for Croup and Lung Trouble. I thought little of it but bought a bottle in the hopes that it might help a little. It gave me wonderful relief, and the second bottle completely cured me. My recovery is permanent, too, for ever since I have not had the slightest return of my enemy. I consider Acker's English Remedy by long odds the best medicine in the world for hacking coughs, asthma and bronchitis. It completely masters those stubborn diseases that many people wrongly suppose to be incurable. If sufferers will but try a single bottle, it will prove every word I have said, and more too."

CHOLERA IN CHINA.

The Result of Neglect of the Sanitary Regulations.

Kuropaka Doctors Hoping to Enforce Modern Methods of Prevention on Account of Existing Superstitions.

Many details of the great plague in Canton and Hong Kong are interesting as showing the attitude of the natives toward foreign doctors and the difficulty of enforcing the simplest sanitary regulations. From all accounts, had the European doctors been permitted at the outset to enforce a house-to-house inspection, the death list would never have risen above fifty a day and the disease would have been restricted to Hong Kong.

As it is, says a Shanghai letter in the New York Sun, cases of the deadly disease are appearing in all the neighboring Chinese places, and it is apparent that victims of the plague may be found at any time in Shanghai or other ports that have close connection with Hong Kong.

There is no question that the present plague appeared in severe form in Yunnan last winter. It has been known there for several seasons. It was carried to Canton in March by traders. The disease is not a new one, as it has appeared from time to time in Persia and Arabia between 1853 and 1878. The latter year was memorable because the plague reached Europe. It broke out in Yunnan in 1878, but the Russian government suppressed it by prompt measures.

China has not been visited by a great plague for many years, but there is good authority for the statement that the plague which ravaged Europe in the fourteenth century broke out in China.

The medical returns from Hong Kong show that the present is the true plague. All the symptoms are those described by medical experts who have seen the disease raging among Moslem pilgrims to Mecca. It is an acute fever, accompanied by evidences of blood poisoning in the skin, the throat and the groin swell up, and abscesses and carbuncles frequently appear; there are hemorrhages under the skin and from some of the organs. The strength of the patient soon goes away, and in a few hours the disease is often fatal.

Why the disease excites so much terror is because there have been few opportunities for carefully studying it. The Russian doctors who studied the plague in Astrakhan came to the conclusion that it was propagated by microbes.

One physician at Hong Kong attributes its spread to a purely vegetable poison which arises from the earth and proves fatal first to the small domestic animals which are nearest to the ground. Whatever be the cause, it is certain that the rat, which so frequently burrows in the ground, was the first victim of the plague in both Canton and Hong Kong. Thousands were found dead before a single human being was attacked. Then cats and dogs suffered, and finally men and women.

The story that the plague was spread by the Chinese eating rats is not very plausible. Of course, the eating of infected rats may have aided in the spread of the disease, but the infection was brought from Yunnan by caravans of traders, and everything which the victims had used became a source of contagion. The moist climate of the seacoast also helps the spread of the disease.

In Hong Kong it was by a mere matter of accident that the European authorities learned of the disease, as the natives carefully concealed the spread of the contagion. One Chinese minister is the sanitary board. Lau Wei Chuen proved to be hard-headed. He insisted upon having patients sent from the great native hospital of Jung Wah to the European Hygeia, and then, after examination, to the hulks located in the harbor. This was done for a few days. Then the feeling among the Chinese became so bitter that the procedure had to be abandoned. Native members of the sanitary board actually stimulated this hostility to European methods.

Placards were brought to Hong Kong from Canton, which reveal the deadly suspicion of all foreign means of treatment. These placards warned all persons not to go to Hong Kong nor to permit their wives and children to go, because they would fall victims to the foreign doctors, who were chopping up all sick persons in order to make medicine out of their eyes and bones. No amount of explanation has yet sufficed to eradicate the deep-seated suspicion that all foreign doctors are on a still hunt for the eyes of dead Chinese. The people cannot understand that European medicine does not value certain parts of a body for medicine, because their own physicians, who are mainly quacks, insist that by eating certain parts of the bodies of animals one may secure the best qualities of those animals. They cling to this belief, and therefore such absurd placards as those of Christian missionaries, giving native children to secure the find ready credence.

A Violent Attack of Croup
