Santiam Grange has great reason to be hopeful regarding her future. It is gratifying to learn how the teachings of the grange are helpful in promoting deeds of kindness, as is brought out in the action of the neighbors of Mr. Ed Young, of Santiam, who was so dangerously injured two weeks ago by falling upon a pitch fork. They came with their teams, bringing their own feed, and put in 40 acres of grain for him, and expect to put in more.—Cor. in Albany Herald.

An exchange says that the people who need religion are: The man who lets his horse stand out in the cold all day with out a blanket on; the man who growls like a wild beast when his wife asks him for money; the woman who is not what she ought to be; the minister who is looking for an easier place and a higher salary; the man who walks the streets with his hands in his pockets, while his wife carries the baby; the man who keeps a dog and says he cant afford to take the home paper.

Last Saturday a boy about fifteen years old and giving the name of Wm. Daulton, at Mr. Gilkeys place southeast of Scio and asked for something to eat, saying that he was from Portland, and had left home with another boy to see the world but his companion had left him and he was now anxious to return to his home. He was provided for and brought to this city where his father was communicated with by telephoe, and later came to Jefferson on the evening train and drove to Scio the same evening and took his son home with him. The boy showed signs of being of weak mind, as he at times talked of being followed by negros who were trying to catch him. He had a good home his father being pretty well to do and he was attending school when he ranaway. He was pretty glad to get an opportunity to return home and we are satisfied that he has learned a lesson which will not desert him for some time.

He—Yes, very. He can cut almost anything on them. Why, he had a girl skating with him yesterday and he cut a proposal of marriage on the ice.

The past year has been an eventful one with the schools of the state. The difficulty in securing school books until late in the season prevented teachers and pupils accomplishing as much work as the regular course of study requires. It was especially disappointing for those students who were fitting for the 8th grade examination and for teachers papers. The new books are giving general satisfaction and as soon as the young people become familiar with them the perplexity incident to the change will soon be forgotten. Parents ought not to hold teachers and children responsible if the usual amount of work has not been completed.

Rich from Sunflowers. Unusual crops are, not always, but surely in a great number of cases, the crops that pay. Ten years ago, according to the Indianapolis News, John McDonald, a shrewd farmer of Clark county, Indiana, heard that sunflower seed was a crop on which money could be made. At that time even an inferior article paid six to seven cents a pound, and he could raise from 600 to 900 pounds an acre. John said nothing and planted sunflowers. His neighbors laughed and told him he ought to go to Kansas, but he kept on planting, and from a poor renter he became a comfortably situated man and has since retired. Then the neighbors stopped laughing and also planted sunflowers and today the townships of Bethlehem, Owen and Washington have at least 1,000 acres under cultivation. But McDonald got the cream of the market, for now sunflower seed is worth only from 2½ to 4 cents a pound, according to quality. Still it pays better than wheat or corn. This commercial sunflower bears only one blossom, and that a very large one, sometimes yielding a quarter of a peck of seed. A New York firm handles most of the crop. Clark county—and perhaps no other—also raises spelt, a grain much like wheat, but with a husk which takes special milling to remove. It makes finer flour than wheat, more delicate in color, more delicious in taste and more nourishing.

Poor Medical Colleges. Though our best institutions are undoubtedly as good as any in the old world, and many of them better than most of the best foreign schools, there is still a lack of uniformity in medical education in this country, such as cannot be found in any European country. What we need at present, asserts American Medicine, is some means of either weeding out the night schools and other struggling medical colleges having insufficient equipment, or else some means of compelling these institutions to provide satisfactory instruction and to raise their standard. Should we obtain this we may be certain that the old-world students will be obliged to come to this country for instruction, for nowhere is there such wealth or better student material to build with.

Melrose Park, a Chicago suburb, has a new club—popularly known as the Pig club. The tie that binds the members together is a common liking for what used to be called in Indiana "hog fixin's." The president of the Melrose Park Savings bank, Ferdinand Dunnebecke, is president of the club. "We shall hold sessions each week," he says, "and pork shall be one of the meats served. Between times, too, we will eat no other meat than pork." It seems to be a case of "all hog." We wonder what will be the influence of the club on the diet of the community. It will be most interesting and instructive to learn, after a reasonable time, its effect on the individual members.
