How William Strengthened His Memory

Mr. William Thotless is a pleasant, amiable, rather absent-minded man, with a chronic tendency toward forgetting to mail his wife's letters. If that was as far as his forgetfulness extended he might have borne it with humility. But when it reached the degree of making him ridiculous he began to despair.

It was such an insane thing to have a man ask him where his hat was, only to discover he had ben walking for blocks without it, or to take his wife to the races and then drive home without her—forgetting, in fact, all about her. That was a dreadful day for Mr. Thotless, and it took him weeks to live it down.

But the crisis came all in one evening. They had a pretty, comfortable home on Sixtieth street, about three blocks from the elevated. It was raining, and Mr. Thotless conceived the happy idea of pleasing his wife by investing in some fine hot rolls at the bakery, a few blocks from his home.

He smiled as he lowered his umbrella to climb the elevated steps, and continued to smile as he bought his ticket. When the train came to a standstill he gallantly allowed a lady precedence and then politely boarded the train, first trying to raise his umbrella, with the absent-minded smile still on his face. But instead of raising the umbrella he knocked off the hat of a stout German, poked an elderly lady in the ribs, and got all tangled up in the blonde hair of the lady standing just ahead of him.

There was a general look of astonishment on the faces of the other passengers, which turned into a laugh, and Mr. Thotless suddenly awoke to the fact that he was making himself ridiculous.

But the rolls were still uppermost in his mind. On the corner stood a drug store and beside it the bakery shop he sought. He marched cheerfully into the first door he came to, and, addressing a superior-looking young man behind a soda water counter, said:

"Give me half a dozen fresh rolls, please, and I want them very hot."

The young man looked puzzled. He had heard of a good many drinks in his day, but this one was entirely new to him.

"Would you mind repeating your order?" he asked. "I didn't quite catch it."

"Rolls, man, rolls!" shouted Mr. Thotless testily. "Don't you know what rolls are? Bread! Hot bread!"

The young man resumed his superior attitude. "Oh," he said, airily, "we don't make them here. We leave that to the bakery next door."

Then Mr. Thotless awoke from his trance to realize for the first time that he was in the drug store. He meekly apologized and went out. But when did his misfortunes ever come singly? He walked in the next door and again gave his order for rolls, this time to a pert young woman behind a wire screen.

"Say, mister, this is a drug store," she giggled. "We don't sell hot rolls; we sell the cure for the indigestion you get after eating them," and she laughed again joyfully at her own wit.

As Mr. Thotless made his hasty egress he heard the voice of the superior young man say: "That dern fool has just been in this door asking for those same rolls," and their jeering laughter followed him all the way home.

But his troubles were not yet over. Armed with the rolls at last, he walked peacefully on until he reached Sixty-first street. There was one thing he never forgot to do; that was to look at the number of the house in order to avert any tendency toward mistakes, for he was well aware of his weakness. It was the right number, so he pulled out his key and thought of the rolls so hot and snug under his arm and of Maria's pleasure, and chuckled indulgently to himself.

It occurred to him that the hall looked queer and that he had never seen that hat rack before, but his wife had always been a great hand at changing things about. But he could have taken his oath that that paper always had been red. "Strange," he thought, "how little a man can really be relied upon to remember these details."

"Marie!" he called gleefully. "Where are you, pet?"

"An' who be you, to be addressing me thus?" came a voice from the basement.

"A new girl," sighed Mr. Thotless. He remembered now that Maggie had given notice.

"I'm calling your mistress," he said, with dignity. "Where is she?"

"An' shure, why should I be telling the likes of ye?" came the rather uncivil answer as Marie's red head and arms akimbo appeared at the top of the steps.

"Who let you in?" she shouted, with rising fury. "An' state your business, quick."

Mr. Thotless began to grow angry. "Where do you come from?" he shouted back.

"Where do I come from, indeed! An' what business is it of yours where I come from? I come from the County Cork, if ye must know, an' I'm an honest woman as has had her place for 14 years and knows an honest face whin she sees it, which is not yours, sir, a-coming into the houses of dacent people like the sneak thief which ye are!" and she paused, not from lack of words, but from lack of breath. "Ef ye don't git out of here in double-quick time I'll throw ye out meself. I'll have the whole perlice force down on ye," she added, threateningly, and looked quite equal to the purpose.

"Isn't this No. 77?" asked Mr. Thotless, beginning to feel a horrible misgiving.

"Yis."

"Isn't it Sixtieth street?" with more assurance.

"Indade it is not. It's Sixty-first street you're in, and I reckon ye knows it pritty well, too. But mark ye, if I be a hearing of ye a breaking into any houses on Sixtieth street—"

But she got no further. Mr. Thotless made a bold dash for the door and was down the street as the faint echo of the threat sounded in his ears.

That was why the very next day when a young man came into his office with a book giving rules on how to strengthen the memory, Mr. Thotless dropped his work at once and gave four dollars for the volume.

"You see," said the young man, in explanation, "all you have to do is to follow the rules and memorize these numbers. Why, sir, at the end of the week you'll find you can remember whole lectures if you want to."

"How delightful," said Mr. Thotless. "I don't care so much about the lectures; the practical things are what I'm looking for."

"Oh, that's all right," said the young man, glibly. "Naturally, if you can remember one thing you can remember another," he explained, vaguely. Then he departed, leaving Mr. Thotless in blissful possession of his memory strengthener.

All day he forgot things—forgot to write a letter, forgot to send a telegram, forgot to send over to the bank in time before it closed—forgot, in short, pretty much everything he had wanted to remember, but he was buoyed up with the hope that soon all this would be changed. He was even cheerful after he had gone into a shop, and, putting his cane on the counter, took up the feather duster which was lying near it and jauntily carried it for a block before he discovered his error.

At last the day was over. He took his book in one hand and his overcoat on his arm and boarded the homeward train. And really that book was splendid. Before he had reached Fifty-ninth street he had mastered a whole page of intricate numbers. He was jubilant, and walked home with the elastic tread of a boy.

"Marie," he said, showing his treasure to his wife, "I have the finest memory strengthener you ever saw. All you have to do is to study according to this method and you can remember anything you want in five minutes. No more forgetting of letters, eh, my love?" he queried, playfully.

But Marie was not listening attentively. She was looking him over critically and he felt instinctively that something was wrong.

"William," she asked, reproachfully, "where is your new overcoat?"

And then William dropped his book and set up a great cry. "I left it on the train," he said, sadly. "I was reading this fool book and forgot it completely."

Since that day Mr. Thotless has let bad enough alone, and he is willing to give that memory strengthener to anyone who wants it. But Marie finds it useful when she has letters to mail, for she just shows it to her husband, and somehow he never forgets her letters.—N. Y. Times.

CHANCES OF MARRIAGE.

Things for the Young Girls and Spinsters to Ponder Over.

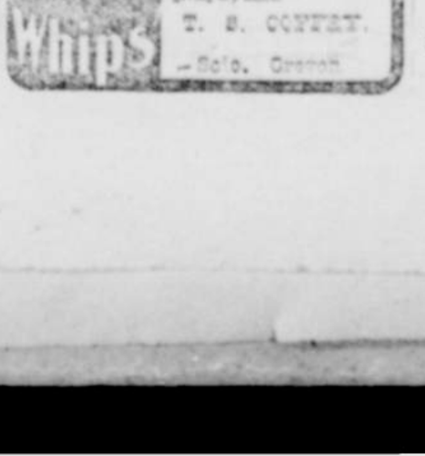
What useful knowledge the facts concerning marriage and age constitute for women who are unmarried! They clearly indicate to the women whose age is from 20 to 24 that she shall particularly favor the attention of men from 20 to 24, or 25 to 29.* She had best pay particular attention to the former, because the sterner sex marries much more frequently at that age than after reaching the age of 25. So a spinster from 25 to 29 years old has the surest choice of men aged from 30 to 34 and 35 to 39, the former group supplying the better chance to her.

Out of every 100 women on the average only 32 remain unmarried.

Now, then, how is it as to what may be called the marriage combinations? Naturally these are only four in number—widows and widowers, bachelors and maids and vice versa. The fact shows that 85 out of every 100 marriages are those of the bachelor and maid and that the bachelor and the widow rarely wed. This is by no means to be construed, however, that the widow is unpopular. On the contrary, she holds her own with the maids, apparently without difficulty. There is, in these modern days, apparently as much cause for taking the advice of the elder Mr. Weller to "'art as ever."

Tendency of the Times.

The tendancy of medicine science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the sudject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure It has been faily demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical have to contend with, can be prevent by the use og Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from an attack of influenza and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendancy of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years and can be relied upon with implicit confidence Pneumonia often resuts from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discouvered that there is fevrer and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is anounced that the pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberain,s Cough Remedy as soon as contracted. It always cures For sale by All Dealers.



Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

A FEW FARM NOTES

Never trust to luck in your poultry yard. Have a system and live up to it at all seasons of the year.

Don't blame the breed if your hens dont lay If your method are wrong the hens need pity rather than censure.

The early hatched pullets make the best layers, even the following year, so try to have them hatched during February and March.

After the first week little chicks will stand the cold weather allright if they have a warm dry place to run to when they prefer.

To get earliest results with potatoes for a few very early, let them sprout in a cool room till they have two leaves on, then drop some phosphate on the hills where you plant' put in carefully and not break the shoots and you will find they will grow right along.

For all soft-bodied insects that disturb your garden tobacco water is often used with effect. It takes about a pound of stems to a gallon of water that is after you have boiled the stems to a brown liquid enough water to make a gallon for each pound used and it is made doubly effective by stirring in a pound of whale oil soap to each fifty gallon.

Again is the hop-grower smiling the one who still has his 1902 crop. The price is steadily advancing and will get up to the 30 cent mark by the middle of February, no doubt. The quotation was 27½ cents yesterday.

Every farm premises should have in addition to an implement house a work shop with a good light and a stove in it so that the farmer may at in stormy days repairing machinery, building gates and doing such work as may be done under cover.

Keep only one pure breed of fowls and try to improve that each year. By careful attention they will constantly grow better.

Don't let ducks and geese stay where young chicks are kept. The two will never thrive in same-yards

Clean and thoroughly air the stable before milking.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT THE ORIGINAL LIVER MEDICINE

A sallow complexion, dizziness, biliousness and a coated tongue are common indications of liver and kidney diseases. Stomach and bowel troubles, severe as they are, give immediate warning by pain, but liver and kidney troubles, though less painful at the start, are much harder to cure. Thedford's Black-Draught never fails to benefit diseased liver and weakened kidneys. It stirs up the torpid liver to throw off the germs of fever and ague. It is a certain preventive of cholera and Bright's disease of the kidneys. With kidneys reinforced by Thedford's Black-Draught thousands of persons have dwelt immune in the midst of yellow fever. Many families live in perfect health and have no other doctor than Thedford's Black-Draught. It is always on hand for use in an emergency and saves many expensive calls of a doctor.

Mullins, S. C., March 10, 1901.

I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for three years and I have not had to go to a doctor since I have been taking it. It is the best medicine for me that is on the market for liver and kidney troubles and dyspepsia and other complaints. Rev. A. G. LEWIS.

HE RIDES IN HIS CARRIAGE.

The Young Man Who Saw a Chance to Get Ahead in the World.

A few years ago circumstances opened up a lucky chance to a young man who was eking out a poor and unpleasant existence on a scrubby farm in the Piscataquis backwoods. Even this poor bit of earth was not all his own, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal. He was remote from neighbors, and so far from a sawmill that the buildings were left to tumble down for want of lumber to repair them. In this state of things the Canadian Pacific railway was located around the side of the mountain just above his valley, and hundreds of Italians and other laborers were put to work. It required two years to build this part of the road, working winters as well as in warm weather. The humble farmer saw his chance. He went to the settlements and secured a supply of clothing and knick-knacks to sell on commission, and soon rose to the dignity of having goods of his own. He does not live in the backwoods any more, for as soon as the road was built and the laborers departed he folded his tent also and went forth, bought one of the best farms in Piscataquis, paying cash down, and now lives in comfort, rides in his carriage, sends his children to the best schools and all that. His case is one of those which show the advantage of promptly catching hold of Fortune, even if she is found in an unexpected place.

A Weak Stomach

causes a weak body and invites disease. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures and strengthens the stomach, and wards off and overcomes disease. J. B Taylor a prominent merchant of Chriesman, Tex. says: "I could not eat because of a weak stomach. I lost all strengt and run down in weight. All that money could do was done but all hopes of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol I concluded to try it. The first bottle benifitted me, and after taking four bottles I am fully restored to my usual strength weight and health." E. C. Peery.

Five Good Reasons.

That the Rio Grande route is the most popular one between the Pacific coast and the east, is evidenced by the fact that the greater per cent. of transcontinental travelers use it.

First, the scenic attractions in view are unequaled in the world.

Second, the daily personally conducted tourist car excursions being especially adapted for ladies travelling alone or with children, affords a comfortable mode of travel at rates within reach of all.

Third, it is the only route between the East and West passing directly through Salt Lake City, or modern Zion.

Fourth, the choice of two distinct routes through the heart of the Rocky Mountains.

Fifth, three fast through trains daily between Ogden and Denver equipped with every modern convenience.

There are many other reasons why this route is the most comfortable and enjoyable in the whole country.

You can learn a great deal on the subject of through travel, and receive some very beautiful and interesting booklets, by calling on or writing to the undersigned. W. C. McBride, Gen'l Agent, or M. J. Roche, Traveling Passenger Agent, 124 Third Street, Portland, Ore.

Saved Her Child's Life.

"In three weeks our chubby little boy was changed by Pneumonia almost to a skeleton," writes Mrs W Watkins of Pleasant City, O. "A terrible cough set in that, in spite of a good doctors treatment for several weeks, grew worse every day. We then used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was soon sound and well. We are sure this grand medicine saved his life." At the present juncture, says the London Graphic, the want of a trained naval reserve and an adequate personnel is causing the United States navy department grave trouble. The men in the United States navy, excluding the fish commission and the coast survey, are 8,685 in number, and of these only 55 per cent. are American born. The American citizens, however, number 74 per cent. English seamen who have served their time in our navy are largely represented among the aliens or naturalized Americans. It was so in the war of 1812, when hundreds of British tars were to be found in the American frigates which beat us with such painful uniformity. The food is better than in our navy, the pay higher, and the discipline is not so strict. It is pleasing to note the fact that the American officers recognize the high value of the British element. Now that the two great branches of our race are reunited in sympathy we shall not grudge our cousins the help of British hands.
