"Goodness, no! Three of his aunts, his sister and a cousin were there listening to every word I said to him."—Detroit Free Press.

Satisfactory Division.
The old farmer and his wife had agreed to separate. They had only one child.

"Everything friendly?" inquired a neighbor.
"Oh, yes," replied the old man carelessly.
"No trouble about making a fair division of the property?"
"Oh, no. She gets the kid and the canned fruit, and I get the pig and the apples. That's even enough, ain't it?"—Chicago Post.

The Temperature.
"Why do you watch the thermometer on the wall so closely?" queried the invalid.
"Because," replied the untrained nurse, "the doctor said if the temperature got any higher I was to give you another dose of quinine."

Reverberated.
"John Henry, I'll thrash you soundly if I ever catch you telling another story that isn't true."
"And yet, ma, I heard you say to the minister that I had great imagination."

AS OLD AS THE PYRAMIDS

That blood poison existed among the ancients has been proven beyond question. It has been traced back thousands of years, and is as old as the Pyramids. This blighting curse has been handed down from nation to nation and from individual to individual till it has spread to all parts of the world.

Contagious blood poison, as it is called in modern times, begins with a small sore or ulcer through which the virus enters the blood. This is followed by inflammation and swelling of the glands of the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores appear in the mouth and the throat becomes ulcerated, and as the disease takes a deeper hold and the blood becomes more thoroughly infected, the hair and eyebrows drop out, the skin is spotted with copper-colored spots, the bones and muscles ache, and it seems to the victim of this monster scourge there is not a sound spot in the whole body.

The horror of this awful disease can never be told. The one who contracts it suffers in body and mind, and if the poison is not eradicated transmits the taint to his children, and Contagious Blood Poison thus becomes responsible for many of the ills of childhood—Skin Eruptions, Catarrhal Troubles, Sore Eyes, Scalp Disease, White Swelling, Scrofula and others just as bad. S. S. S., the great vegetable blood purifier and tonic, has long been recognized as a radical and safe cure for Contagious Blood Poison. It counteracts the deadly virus and cleanses and purifies the diseased blood, and under its tonic effects the general health improves and soon all signs of blood poison are gone. The strong mineral remedies, Mercury and Potash, which are so often prescribed for the disease, dry up the sores, skin eruptions and all external signs, but leave the stomach and digestion ruined and the system in such condition that the disease usually returns in worse form than ever. S. S. S. is guaranteed a purely vegetable remedy. $1.00 is offered for proof that it contains a single mineral ingredient. If you have blood poison write for our special book, describing the different stages and giving all the symptoms, with directions for treating one's self at home. Our physicians will furnish any information or advice wanted free of charge.

Had All the Symptoms.
Dear Sirs: As a result of a serious blood disorder my blood became poisoned and I suffered severely with Rheumatism and other symptoms not necessary to mention. A friend of mine told me that he had been cured of my trouble by S. S. S., and upon his recommendation I began its use. After using it for some time my blood was thoroughly cleansed of all poison and made pure and strong again. I wish also to speak of its tonic properties. While purging my blood of impurities, it built up my general health, improved my appetite, gave me increased strength, and I felt better in every way. I am a great believer in S. S. S., and with pleasure commend it to all in need of a blood medicine.

Slaughter of the Innocents.
Odessa, a city of 400,000 inhabitants, has an orphan asylum at which since 1897 from 65 to 68 per cent of the infants received each year have died. Official investigation showed that this frightful rate of mortality was due to unsanitary arrangements and the use of poor milk.

What Steamships Can Carry.
The railroad car will carry as much as twenty teams of horses could haul, and the great ocean steamers will transport as much as 400 railroad cars can carry.

Marriages may be made in heaven, but a lot of them end in the other place.

GOOD Short Stories

It is related that a woman, who visited the British Museum recently, said to an attendant: "I have been looking about for a skull of Oliver Cromwell. Have you no skull of Cromwell here?"
"No, madam," the attendant answered. "How very odd," she exclaimed; "they have a fine one in the museum at Oxford."

On his first visit to London, an Aberdeen visitor visited a refreshment parlor, and, noting a woman eating an ice, said to the waiter: "Hi, man, give me yin o' thee." Being supplied, he took a spoonful, and made a very face. "I'm dootin' it's a bit frost bitten, mister," said he. "Oh, no, sir," remarked the waiter, "it's an ice." "Gosh! Do they eat ice in London?" asked the wondering Aberdeen; "man, we slide an' skate out in Aberdeen!"

James M. Barrie, the novelist, has no patience with reporters who try to pry into his private affairs. On one occasion he was asked to pen a short autobiography. At first he hesitated, and then, the waiter began to coax him, he stopped him, took up his pen, and wrote as follows: "On arrival in London it was Mr. Barrie's first object to make a collection of choice cigars. Though the author of 'My Lady Nicotine' does not himself smoke, his grocer's message-boy does. Mr. Barrie's pet animal is the whale. He feeds it on ripe chestnuts."

Andrew Carnegie is only a few inches above five feet in height. Henry W. Phipps, his old partner, is not an inch taller, and John Walker, the other member of the trio who revolutionized the manufacture of steel, has perhaps a little the better of both Carnegie and Phipps. As for Henry C. Frick, his head would just about reach to the shoulder of a man of ordinary height. It is said that one day, when these four steel masters were walking together on the streets of Pittsburgh, a boot-black called out to his business rival further down the block, as the millionaires passed: "Eh, Jimmy, git onto der runts!"

Walking home from school, the other day, some children were discussing the perfection and usefulness of their respective fathers. "My father's the best man in the world," said one little girl; "he is a minister. He makes people go to church." "Mine is the best," piped up another; "he's a doctor. He makes sick people well so they can go to church." Three or four more enlarged upon the benefit the world derived from their fathers, when finally a sweet, blue-eyed little girl said: "My papa's the best of all. He's a poet." "A poet?" said another, in sympathetic surprise; "why, a poet isn't a profession! It's a disease!"

Some curious anecdotes are related of Hermann Zumppe, the Wagnerian conductor at Munich, who died suddenly a few weeks ago. He was well known to be a spiritualist, and believed that the ghosts of dead composers inspired his conducting of their works. One day Zumppe told another conductor of note how Beethoven's spirit was present during the performance of one of the symphonies, and so pleased was the ghost that, after the end of the first movement, he exclaimed: "At last! 'Ah, my dear fellow,' exclaimed the other conductor, 'surely Beethoven made a mistake. He thought it was the end of the last movement.'"

Knew the Voice.
Like many other blind people, the late Mr. Milburn, chaplain of Congress, could identify people by their voices even when he did not know them well, or had not seen them for years. This is not strange when we remember that Helen Keller, who is deaf and blind, can meet ten people at once whom she has never "seen" before, and when they shake hands with her to say good-by, can call them all by their right names, identifying them by the feeling of their hands. The Boston Transcript tells a story which illustrates the power among the blind to recognize voices.

Once, when Mr. Milburn was out driving, a man stopped the carriage and beckoned Mr. Milburn's friend to come across the street. He went, and the stranger said:
"When I was 18 or 20 years old Doctor Milburn was in the habit of dining with my father. I was to see if he would know me by my voice."
The two men went back to Mr. Milburn's carriage. The stranger said:
"Mr. Milburn, do you know me?"
"Yes, sir, you are the son of my old friend, the publisher, Mr. Harper." Mr. Milburn had not heard the voice for more than thirty years.

Not long before Mr. Milburn died Bishop Cranston visited him and entered the room without having his name announced. When he spoke, Mr. Milburn called him by his name. They had not met for twenty-nine years.

Those Picture Puzzles.
"Oh, I know what's the matter with you!" cried Mrs. Tankley.
"Zat sho?" gurgled Mr. Tankley, behind his paper. "Wat's matter wis me?"
"Oh, it's plain enough! You're holding that paper upside down!"
"Yes? Well—oh—I'm tryin' sholve a puzzle. Picture of Roosevelt wis out a hat; must find hat."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ABUSE GERMAN SOLDIERS.

Privates Are Treated with the Greatest Indignity by Their Officers.

There have recently been a good many convictions of German army officers for abuse of military authority in the treatment of subordinates and have recently been exciting painful attention. Since January 1, 1903, there have been 159 convictions of officers and non-commissioned officers for cruelty to their men, and the sentences of imprisonment or incarceration in a fortress which have been imposed amount, when added together, to over fifty years. Between the end of June and the end of September there have been no fewer than eighty convictions of this kind, involving sentences of imprisonment to the total terms of which amounted to over twenty-four years, to say nothing of condemnations involving incarceration in a fortress, degradation and other penalties.

Eleven of these eighty convictions were against officers and as their punishments varied between four months' incarceration in a fortress and seven days' ordinary arrest it is assumed that their offenses were not of such a heinous character as those of the non-commissioned officers. In one case, however, an officer was sentenced to two months' imprisonment and was dismissed from the service. The heaviest sentence was that which was imposed upon the non-commissioned officer Breidenbach, of the Fourth Guards regiment, who was condemned to eight years' imprisonment for a very large number of aggravated cruelties inflicted upon the men of his company.

The cases have been most numerous among the infantry and artillery; there has been only one case in the cavalry. By far the largest number of cases were in the Prussian contingent, where the penalties inflicted amounted to a total of over twenty-three years' imprisonment in Saxony. It must be remembered, however, that the Prussian contingent represents more than three-fourths of the whole strength of the German army.

DESTINY OF HUMAN SOULS.
Theory That the Spirits of Deceased Men Pass Into the Beasts.

Are the bodies of animals inhabited by the souls of human villains dead and gone? Don't sneer too hastily at the question, for it should be answered finally in the negative science as at a loss to account for the utter gravity of the animals. It is apparent to the duldest observer that dumb beasts exercise a malign influence over man. Think of the temper ruined by cows that have kicked over half-filled pails of milk. Think of the reputations for truth that have been destroyed by trout. Think of the honesty that has been turned into deceit by the horse, so that they who trade in that animal are bywords among their less severely tempted brethren. Think of the indefinite prolongation of this list that might be made and then consider if animals are or are not animated by the souls of human wretches that have passed away.

Some such theory must be accepted and it is not open to doubt that reasonable people will accept this: The souls of the wicked are condemned to pass into animals and to stay there until they have discovered prospective tenants worse than themselves.

This theory explains everything. The liars inhabit fish, the tricksters horses and those given to butting in become goats. In the attempt to end their tenancy by finding suitable successors the evil spirits resort to temptation, with, alas! unfeeling success. The half-proud trout dropping off the hook flaps his tail in ecstatic certainty that the angler will proclaim him a five-pounder or at least. And the look of human anticipation on the face of a goat about to knock some unsuspecting person into a barbed wire fence can only proceed from the knowledge that the resultant explosion will lower another soul into the mire as a stepping stone for himself.

The theory is irrefutable and its general acceptance would help the world to a higher plane.—Portland Oregonian.

UNIQUE BUTTONHOLE CUTTER.

Some of the most simple ideas of the inventive genius have proven of the most value to humanity, and it is safe to venture that the idea of a Pennsylvania man for a buttonhole cutting scissors will develop into a wonderful aid to all those dressmakers and others into whose hands it may fall.

There have been buttonhole-cutting scissors before, it is true, but here is an affair that combines an ordinary pair of scissors with one that will make the little slits in the cloth and will avert all necessity for laying down one of the tools of seamstress art for the picking up of another.

This arrangement, which is made plain by the accompanying picture, consists of a pair of scissors which can be used in ordinary cutting, to the handle of which is affixed a peculiarly shaped cutting blade, which will do the buttonhole work in an instant when the cloth is placed beneath it. There is no danger of its being mislaid or lost, for the worker has it ever before her, as she does the other cutting necessary in her work.

It isn't always the long-haired man who has the most brains.

Blame All Upon the Berries.
A small parishioner in Aberdeen brought a basket of strawberries to the minister very early on Monday morning.
"Thank you, my little girl," he said, "they are very beautiful berries. But I hope you didn't gather them yesterday, which was the Sabbath day?"
"No, sir," replied the child, "I picked them this morning. But they was growin' all day yesterday."—Stray Stories.

Paper clothes are the latest novelty. A Berlin tailoring house is now offering complete paper suits for $2.50. The prospectus gives full instructions for measuring one's self, and the firm also advertises in foreign journals, evidently expecting to do an export business.
