The postoffice department has issued a new 2-cent stamp that will replace the rediculous issue now in use. The most noticable new feature is the adornment of the oval frame inclosing the head of Washington and the adoption of a general shield design for the background. In the upper portion of the shield all but four of the stars are hidden by the inscription, "United States of America, Series 1902," and by the upper portion of the framed engraving of Washington, which also covers the greater portion of the thirteen vertical stripes. The figures "2," which has been placed at each lower corner of the frame, is encircled by an oval laurel wreath. The three-quarter engraving of Washington, which was so severely criticized, has been replaced by an engraving of the Stuart head. Beneath this is a ribbon bearing the inscription, "1778—Washington—1799." The new issue is more neatly executed than the old, and has a darker tint.

Blue River all Right.

From the Times.

The fifteen stamp quartz mill, which has been pounding ore at the Lucky Boy mine for the past three years grinding out the precious metal at the rate of $10;000 a month. has been closed down pending removal to the new mill site. Twenty five additional stamps will be added, making the new mill of forty stamp capacity. The new mill is located a few hundred yards farther down the mountains from the old mill where there is plenty of water for the purpose of running the big plant Power for operating the new mill will be furnished by the electric power plant which the Lucky Boy Company has established on the McKenzie river, about six miles from the mill. The power plant is designed to furnish power for operating other mines in the Blue River districts, many of which are destitute of both water and timber in sufficient quantities to make their operation practicable. With electric power however, they can be operated to as good advantage as the Lucky Boy.

The Lucky Boy will have expended about $100,000 when their new mill and plant are in working order. It is established beyond question the fact that the Blue River district is one of the best in the state and has a great future before it. There are many fine properties in this district and the success of the Lucky Boy will tend to encourage the development at a more rapid rate.

Tax Levy.

The total tax levy of Linn county for 1904 is 22.75 mills. The levy, which was made by the county court Tuesday evening, is as follows

	Mills.
State tax	8.5
School	5.4
Sanderson's bridge warrants	1.5
County	3
Roads and bridges	2.25
Indigent soldiers	1
Special road district	2
Total	22.75

The levy for 1903 was 19 mills.

More Money for Schools.

In making annual tax levies this months, County Courts will levy for school purposes a sum that will be equal to $6 per capita upon the school population. Prior to this year the levy for school purposes has been 5 mills on the dollar. In some counties this produced a revenue much in excess of $6 per capita, while in others it produced less. Upon the theory that school revenue should be based upon the number of children of school age rat her than upon the assessed value of property in the county, the Legislature at its regular session in 1903 made the change above indicated. The act also provided that no county should levy a per capita amount less than the per capita for 1903.

A WARM SUGGESTION.

Made by a High Climber Who Has Had Some Hot Experiences.

"If you want to know what heat is," finally said the High Climber, in the "Autobiography of a High Climber," in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, "you must be at the top of a chimney where the furnaces are going at full clip below. I was pointing up the sides of one high chimney in Massachusetts one hot summer day. I was up about 100 feet. I had done one, two, three sides, and now pulled myself up to shift my hook around to the fourth. My bo'sun's chair swung down from this hook, you understand.

"It was hot enough anywhere on the top, but around the cap on the fourth side where the wind was blowing out the smoke and heat it was awful. I dropped my hook down and walked around to the cooler side to rest a bit. Around the cap I had a space of about a foot's width to walk on. In a moment I went back and put my hand on the hook to slide down the rope to my chair. Gee! I thought the hair would come out of my head. My shoes frizzed. The hot iron of the hook blistered my hands. I could stay nowhere near it.

"Again and again I went back to that hook. [illegible] time I was driven to the other [illegible] There in the sun and the [illegible] at pouring up, blowing [illegible] the hook got hotter and [illegible] There was no other way of [illegible] down even. I was caught

"Finally, [illegible] desperation, I took off my undershirt and grabbed the hook with it. Blistered and burned, I half fell into my chair and managed to let myself down."
