EDITORIAL.

The good roads suggested are numerous these days but the roads in this vicinity need more than suggestions.

Hon. L. T. Harris, of Eugene, speaker of the house of Representatives, annoueces his candidacy for the republican nomination for Congressman from the First District. It was largely due to the efforts of Mr. Harris that Mr. Hermann received the nomination for Congressman at the Eugene convention, and it is said that Harris could have secured the nomination for himself if he had so wished. He is a Linn county boy and is very popular.

The question of the Sunday opening of the Lewis and Clark Fair, the discussion of which has of late occupied considerable time and space in the newspapers of Portland, has been settled by the United States Senate refusing an appropriation unless the fair be closed on Sundays. The discussion became so heated in the metropolis and the agitation so great that even ministers were found who favored Sunday opening It is just as well that Congress has settled the question.

The Southern Pacific should do more for this section of the Willamette Valley. At the least, the S. P. ought to give us an exclusive passenger train and so arrange its running that the trip to Portland and return can be made in less than two days.—Brownsville Times. That's not the least of our troubles either. We can stand the poor passenger service but when it comes to having freight shipped from Portland on Friday and not arrive at West Scio until Monday, it makes us wish for the old stage and freight hauling service by team that used to be for it certainly would'nt take a team four days to go seventy miles.

The Seattle post office authorities have brought to light an ingenius fraud that has been worked for some time. It was perpetrated by a woman who sent out numerous circular to men telling them that if they would send her 25 cents she would send them to Panama in one capacity or another. Of course that seemed a great offer to many young men throughout the state and many of them parted with their quarters. The letters were to have been addressed to Bremington and the quarters rolled in at a remarkable rate—with an outlay to the woman of only a two cent stamp and the price of a circular. After the money was received Mrs. Swain sent her victims a very glowing pamphlet about Columbia, Panama and and all the Central America country. She also sent the information that the concern she was representing was not sending men at present but each name was filed and that a summons would be sent at the first opportunity. The woman was arrested but the case has not yet been up for a hearing.

Benefits of Early Knowledge.

There is among the young, a most lamentable waste of intellect. How few do justice to their native powers; how few so improve their means and talents as to rise to that eminence which a kind providence has placed within their reach. It is peculiar desirable to acquire as much knowledge as possible while young because it is then acquired most easily. As you advance from youth the mind becomes more inclined ann less able to expand, so that if you pass on to mature years with your mind narrowed by ignorance it will probably always revolve in the same little circle. Early knowledge is not only the easiest acquired, but the longest retained. The mind becomes treacherous as age advances. With most persons it begins to fail by thirty-five or forty, and they find by experience, that their early knowledge has the firmest hold upon their minds. One thorough reading of history while young is worth more for the purpose of impressing its facts upon the memory than a dozen readings at middle age; hence the lessons of primary and Sabbath schools imparts the knowledge that most faithfully attends us through all our lives. Early knowledge is very valuable capital with which to start out in life. How often do we hear men advanced in life say, "If I had only possessed the knowledge when young, that I now have, I might have become rich, learned, great and influential." Early knowledge is important to enable one in season to feel his own strength. Thousands mistake their calling for want of it, men and women who might have acted a brilliant part in the pursuits for which they were adapted are often doomed through life to a repelling and fruitless employment, because they did not possess sufficient knowledge while young to direct their knowledge into the right course. Most of all is early knowledge important to dispose and enable you to escape the perils and temptations of sin—to invite your rising energies away from the solicitations of youthful passions—to lay before you the vast motives to rise to the dignity of your intellectual and moral being; that you may thus secure the great end for which you were made, which is, to glorify God. In a very important sense, youth is saved by knowledge and destroyed by lack of it, "My people are destroyed" sayeth the Lord, "for lack of knowledge; bethou hast rejected knowledge, I, also will reject thee." In conclusion I will say, dear young people, improve the time and opportunity offered you for acquiring useful knowledge, and you will never have cause to regret; by so doing you will be an ornament in society, a blessing to your country and the joy and pride to your kind and loving parents.

A SUBSCRBER.

Senator Hanna Passes Away.

Washington D. C., Feb. 15.—Senator Hanna died at his hotel in Washington last evening at 6:45. The direct cause of death was typhoid fever, the details of the struggle against the disease and its beginning and progress being known to the world.

Marcus Alonzo Hanna was born September 24, 1837, at Lisbon O., and at an early age removed to Cleveland, afterwards to be the scene of his large business success. After a few years in the public schools of Cleveland that life work began which developed into prominence in the shipping and mining interests of the land.

Hanna is thought of in connection almost wholly with things political.

He first gained something of notice by his success in the Garfield campaign of 1880, bringing about a meeting between Garfiel and Roscoe Conkling, who had been sulking because of the failure of his plan to renominate General Grant.

In the campaigns of 1884 and 1888 Hanna was an active worker in the interest of John Sherman. But it was in the McKinley campaign of 1896 that his great talents as a farseeing man and shrewd political leader were fully recognized.

William McKinley and Marcus A. Hanna were bound together by strong ties of friendship and enthusiasm for the common cause of a kindred political faith and similar views of great questions, more especially that of the protective policy

Perhaps no man did more than Mr. Hanna to secure McKinley's election in both instances.

Senator Hanna was just entering upon his second term in the senate from his native state.

For srme time before his death he had been much interested in labor questions, standing for arbitrtion rather than strife, and holding much at heart the interest of the wage earner.

The prejudice that gathered in the first McKinley campaign against the senator, having its origin in the articles of clever opposing writers and cartoonists who sought to fix the assertion that Hanna's idea of campaign had to do only with dollars, had largely disappeared of late under the better understanding that had come with knowledge of his life and methods.

Senator Hanna was a man highly regarded by his acquaintances and employes.

In many ways he was a man of marked gifts and stiking personality and his death, at the zenith of his career, will leave a noticable vacancy in public affairs.

Killed an Albino Deer.

An albino deer, with a coat as white as the drifting snow, eyes a delicate pink, and with a tread as soft and discreet as an elk fawn, was killed in the Canyon mountains of southern Oregon recently. It was one of the very few albino deer ever seen in the mountains of the west. Old hunters tell of seeing them, usually separate from the main herd and at various times during the early days; but they were too shy and discreet to be approached near enough for a shot.

The deer was with four other deer at the time it was found, and had this not been true, the hunters would not have taken it for a deer. Its white coat made it far more conspicuous than the remainder of the herd, and it is perhaps for this reason only albino deer are shunned by their mates.

The albino deer bears exactly the same relation to the deer family that the albino of the African race does to human kind. Aside from its white coat and pink eyes, it is like all other deer.

The speciman found in the pine forests of Canyon mountains will be made a part of the exhibit of albi mammals at the Smithsonian Institution.—Blue Mt. Eagle.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Spain's new navy is to cost $60,000,000. We know where she got $20,000,000 of that sum in good money.

Dr. Vail of St Louis, declares that whiskey is good for consumption, It is manufactured for that purpose.

A Berlin scientist announces that radium will paralyze mice. So will cats, and they don't cost $3,000,000 an ounce, either.

Panama is to spend but $2,000,000 of her donation from Uncle Sam, leaving a balance of $8,000,000 for future revolutionists to fight over.

The President is credited with having secured the release of Col. Lynch. He should now try his best to have Judge Lynch placed in restraint.

The young daughter of Jessie McKillip of Lewiston, Pa. swallowed a watch chain. A physician named Darwin discovered the missing links.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., boasts of having cut 80 cords of wood in one winter. His esteemed father is the member of the family who continues to cut ice.

England proposes to raise cotton in her African possessions. It will now be in order for the cotton bulls to send a few boll weevils over to engage in missionary work in Africa.

It is now positively asserted that any negro who can pay $3,000,000 for an ounce of radium and a physician's fee can be turned white. A negro with $3,000,000 probably would not care whether he was white or not.

Don't forget the old man with the fish on his back.

For nearly thirty years he has been traveling around the world, and is still traveling, bringing health and comfort wherever he goes.

To the consumptive he brings the strength and flesh he so much needs.

To all weak and sickly children he gives rich and strengthening food.

To thin and pale persons he gives new firm flesh and rich red blood.

Children who first saw the old man with the fish are now grown up and have children of their own.

He stands for Scott's Emulsion of pure cod liver oil—a delightful food and a natural tonic for children, for old folks and for all who need flesh and strength.

Slightly Off on Pronunciation.

A very estimable woman of Milwaukee is an earnest member of a local German class, but her method of pronouncing some of the words, at least in one specific instance, aroused the mirth of her companions. At a recent meeting of the class, one of the questions in the day's exercise was: "Are you not glad that you are able to learn German?"

This query was in the foreign language, and the answer was: "Ja gewiss," which

IN MODERN LONDON.

Many Quaint Customs Are Still in Vogue, But This One Is the Most Curious.

A host of quaint old customs, says the London Daily Mail, linger round and about the famous "King's Guard" at St. James palace, but perhaps none is more curious than that which decrees that his majesty's health shall not be drunk at dinner, except when the Scots guards are on guard. The omission, when one reflects that this one toast, even when no others are drunk, is invariably honored every evening at every regimental mess and guardroom dinner throughout the British empire, is sufficiently striking.

The explanation lies in the fact that the regiment from across the border was at one time suspected of a leaning toward Jacobitism, and so the officers were specially ordered to drink his majesty's health after dinner, those of other corps being forbidden to do so in order to make the enforced loyalty of the Scotsmen stand out in clearer relief.

It was also ordered that they should not be allowed to use finger glasses after dinner, lest they should drink to "the king over the water," and finger glasses are, in consequence, tabooed there on these occasions to this day.

SALARIES OF ACTORS.

Are Absurdly Exaggerated in the Public Mind and Actors Keep Up the Deceit.

Salaries of actors vary from almost nothing to $500 a week, with a few exceptions that go above that, writes F. E. Fyles, in Leslie's Monthly. I doubt though that any supporting actor outside of Weber & Fields' company gets more than $500. Those that go above are stars, many of whom receive a fixed salary and a percentage on the profits. A female star who crowded a New York theater the season before last for six months received only $150, while her leading man was getting $250. But she was a risky venture for her manager, who lifted her from a minor position to stardom, and a failure would have cost him much. Many stars are their own managers, and engage a business man to direct their affairs for a salary, as they would a supporting actor. The gains of actors are absurdly exaggerated in the public mind, and even among themselves they endeavor to keep up the deceit. A reason that so many English actors are imported is that players of the first class in London receive a third less than equally talented and well-known Americans.

WARNS ONAMERICAN FINANCE

The London Times Says That Growing Liabilities Are a Source of Danger.

In an editorial article discussing the present economic situation in the United States the London Times says it considers that, although the commercial credit of the United States is perhaps not quite so good as it was a year ago and the actual situation not entirely free from disquieting features, yet, being favored with good harvests and a promising cotton crop, business prospects appear to be healthy for another year.

"For the next few months, at least, the big harvests of the United States will probably secure the business world against the collapse of credit in New York, but," the paper continues, "unless we are to accept the new fangled doctrine that in some mysterious way economic laws need not be taken into account where America is concerned, the present state of things and the present fashion of finance cannot continue forever.

"Mere magnitude of resources, however dazzling to the unthinking, will not save their owner from embarrassment, or worse, if he allows his liabilities to grow in excess of them."

The Italian Court.

Like King Edward, King Victor Emmanuel is engaged in a very radical weeding out of the invitation list of his court, and is adopting a policy of exclusiveness. In the days of King Humbert almost anybody could secure an invitation to court balls, especially if a foreigner, and the guests as a general rule numbered 3,000 to 4,000.

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be bourne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and that by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the threatened attack of pneumenia may be warded off. This remedy is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W J Smith, of Sanders Ala. who is also a druggist says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribing it in my practice for the past six years. I use is in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results. For sale by all dealers.

PERT AND PERSONAL.

A. S. Cook, the Boston merchant, is the king of the Maine camp owners. He now controls 400 square miles of sporting territory in that state.

Henry Cole, of Denver, started to convert his estate of $400,000 into cash for the poor, but was halted by his wife, who reminded him that half of it was hers.

Congressman Lacey, of Iowa, has contributed to the Congressional Record an essay in which he says: "The buffalo was the noblest of all the wild animals that inhabited this country when America was discovered. He was gentlemen among beasts, just as the game hog is a beast among gentlemen."

Speaking the other day of defects of the memory, Senator Dillingham read the story of a noted character in Vermont who once sent a messenger by the senator to his father in these words: "You tell the governor that although I am getting along in years, I can see just as well as I ever could; I can hear just as well; my mental powers are unimpaired; and if I have ever forgotten anything, I must say that I cannot remember what it was."

Measured by the foot rule, M. Combes, the new French premier, does not amount to much, being only five feet three inches tall, but it is said that no statesman now alive, nor in a generation, except Gladstone, equals him in the range of mental labor. He is by profession a physician, but he cannot have practiced much. He was at one time a school master, and is a leading authority on French educational affairs. His scholarly and literary activities have for years been large and comprehensive, embracing such topics as the Latin poet, Virgil, Kant's metaphysics, the philosophy of St. Augustine and the social theories of St. Simon.
