Surgery in High Favor.

Not so many years ago surgical operations were generally regarded by the public as a means of last resort, and were submitted to only when the patient or his family was advised that no other escape was open for the sufferer. Frequently the sick man was in extremes when he went under the surgeon's knife, and it is asserted by medical men that the large mortality in a given number of operations was due to this fact. In this way the popular fear of going through these ordeals was increased, the surgeons generally being held responsible for the fatal outcome.

To-day there is less fear of the knife, and statistics show that the mortality is far less. This is attributed by the profession to the advanced views now held and what may be termed the greater popularity of surgery. Of course, a most potent contribution to this condition of affairs is the more extensive knowledge possessed by the modern surgeon and his greater skill. But there is another source from which help comes; that is, that cases requiring the services of surgeons are not delayed until the last minute, when the patients are so exhausted or they cannot stand the shock they must necessarily sustain.

To-day it is appreciated by all students of the ills to which flesh is heir that if the knife is to be used the sooner it is done the better; just as everybody knows that if a disease is to be checked the sooner medicine is administered the better. And to this view of the matter the doctor and the surgeon have gradually educated the people. This accounts for the popularity of surgery and for the material diminishing of the death rate of persons passing under the knife.—Baltimore Herald.

The Theory.

"This health food doesn't do any good," asserted the irate customer.

"Perhaps you overlooked the first rule relating to its use," suggested the grocer.

"What's that?"

"First get your health. You don't seem to understand the theory of it. You wouldn't get dog biscuit unless you had a dog, would you?"

"No."

"Or birdseed unless you had a bird?"

"No."

"Then what are you doing with health food before you get health?"

"But if I had health I wouldn't need it."

"Well, that's your lookout."

Proved Beyond a Doubt.

Middlesex, N. Y., July 25.—(Special)—That Rheumatism can be cured has been proved beyond a doubt by Mrs. Betsey A. Clawson, well known here. That Mrs Clawson had Rheumatism and had it bad, all her acquaintances know. They also know she is now cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. Mrs. Clawson tells the story of her cure as follows:

"I was an invalid for most five years caused by Inflammatory Rheumatism, helpless two-thirds of the time. The first year I could not do as much as a baby could do; then I rallied a little bit and then a relapse. Then a year ago the gout set in my hands and feet. I suffered untold agony and in August, 1903, when my husband died I could not ride to the grave.

"I only took two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and in two weeks I could wait on myself and saw my own wood. I dug my own potatoes and gathered my own garden last fall. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills put the Kidneys in shape to take all the uric acid out of the blood.

Blessed Be Business.

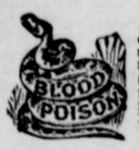
The ladies of the club were closely grouped about the speaker of the afternoon, a remarkably successful woman, in whom commercial and literary ability were admirably balanced.

"Tell us, in a few words, how to be successful," said one of the ladies, insistently.

"To be successful," said the successful one, "all we women have to do is to make as much of a business of our own business as we do of the things that are none of our business."

KILL THE SERPENT

The worst disease the world has ever known, and the greatest scourge to the human race, is Contagious Blood Poison. One drop of the virus of this most horrible of all diseases will pollute and vitiate the purest, healthiest blood, and within a short time after the first little sore appears the system is filled with the awful poison and the skin breaks out in a red rash; the glands of the groins swell, the throat and mouth become ulcerated, the hair and eyebrows drop out, and often the entire surface of the body is covered with copper-colored splotches and sickening sores and eruptions. Contagious Blood Poison is as treacherous and elusive as the serpent. You may be carrying it in your veins with no visible evidences of its existence; for while mercury and potash seem to cure and all external signs disappear, the disease is doing its destructive work within, or the patient is constantly harassed by returning symptoms and unmistakable traces of the blood poison. Thousands of physical wrecks and chronic invalids from the effects of Blood Poison know the uncertainty of the mercury and potash treatment—that it stifles but does not kill the serpent. As long as there is life in the serpent there is danger in its fangs; and while your blood is tainted there is danger of infection. Safety lies only in crushing out the life of the loathsome disease and killing the serpent. For many years S. S. S. has been known as an antidote for Blood Poison. It is a remedy composed entirely of vegetable ingredients, and we offer $1,000 for proof that it contains the least particle of mercury, potash or other mineral. It thoroughly purifies the blood, improves the appetite and digestion, and tones up all parts of the system. In chronic and long-standing cases of Blood Poison, S. S. S. acts promptly and without leaving any bad after-effects.



After suffering twelve years from Contagious Blood Poison, and trying the best physicians obtainable, and all the patent medicines procurable, and steadily continuing to grow worse, I gave up all hope of recovery, and physicians pronounced my case incurable. Hoping against hope, I tried S. S. S. I improved from the first bottle, and after taking twelve was cured sound and well, and for two years have had no return or symptom of the vile disease.

SANDALWOOD.

Erromango is one of the larger islands of the New Hebrides, from which were formerly brought large quantities of sandalwood. The carelessness of the natives in protecting the forests reduced the product, until now there is very little valuable wood on the island. Rev. H. A. Robertson, in "Erromango, the Martyr Isle," gives a brief history of the sandalwood trade.

The Erromangans for generations used the sandalwood as they would any other, for fuel, and had no idea of its value until foreigners came and asked for it. The only price that was at first given was a small bit of hoop-iron, from three to four inches in length, and this for a great boat load of wood. The savages were greatly taken with the iron, for by sharpening it on a stone and fastening it to a piece of wood they made themselves rough, light hatchets. Before that they had nothing but their ancient implements of stone with which to work.

Netal, the great chief Netal, of Cook's Bay, used to delight to tell me of the olden times on Erromango, and how slow were the methods of cutting trees for their houses and canoes. Every tree had to be burned at the base, and when that was done there still remained the slow work of hacking with stone axes to sever it from the stump. Such was the early Erromangan method of hewing wood, and the sandalwood had to be cut in this way.

The ships carried great lengths of hoop-iron bound together. Amid the babble of voices from swarms of naked, painted savages clamoring for their pay, and the confusion and shoutings that arose as the huge logs were swung into place, there could be heard the click of the hammer as it struck the anvil; the iron was being cut into the coveted lengths.

After the logs were burned and cut down, they were carried to the bay on men's shoulders. The biggest logs had to be dragged down the rocky mountain tracks.

At the present time the sandalwood tree, once so plentiful, is fast disappearing, and there is little to remind one that sandalwood once grew on every hill and clustered in every valley of Erromango.

In appearance the bark, which is rough and of a light-brown color, is somewhat like that of the cherry tree. The narrow leaves, which are of a rich green tint and smooth, shiny surface, are not more than three inches in length. There is no odor until the tree is cut, and the young limbs have none at all. It is said that unless the bark is removed the wood loses the sweet scent and becomes valueless. It is almost impossible now to secure a fairly good specimen. Intertribal wars, as well as the traders, have helped to destroy the tree, and the habit that natives have of setting fire to everything and anything has nearly completed the ruin.

NOT WHAT IT USED TO BE.

Traffic on the Mississippi Has Experienced a Decline in Recent Years.

The best days of the Mississippi River traffic are long since past, and the scenes that once endeared that stream have apparently gone never to return.

The best year for steamboat business on the Mississippi is said to have been the one immediately before the outbreak of the Civil War, says Mr. Chittenden in the World To-day. During that conflict, until the North gained control of the river, commercial boating below the mouth of the Ohio was broken up entirely. On the Missouri a new source of business sprang up in the early years of the war by the discovery of gold at the headwaters of that stream. Then began that most remarkable episode in the history of river navigation, the sending of cargoes from St. Louis to the base of the Rocky Mountains, more than 2,000 miles distant and half a mile vertically upward.

Long before the steamboat business on the Mississippi and its tributaries had reached its maximum the forces which were to accomplish its ruin had begun to operate. The beginning of practical railroading followed many years after that of steamboating, but when it once got well under way its progress and development rapidly outstripped those of its older rivals. Here was a steam engine that could go with its load anywhere. It did not have to follow water courses. It could climb mountains if they were in its way. It could serve the inland town as well as the river port. Its speed was four times or more that of the steamboat. It was not put out of commission by the winter's ice, but served the public the year round. Clearly, the steamboat stood little show in its struggle with a rival like this.

For many years, from one cause and another, the boats held their own; but finally the railroads got the upper hand, and their vast development in the twenty-five years following the Civil War practically drove the steamboat business from the rivers.

The commercial interests of the country have always looked with regret upon the disappearance of the steamboat. There is a deep-rooted conviction that our rivers have some value in the commercial economy of the country, as regulators of freight rates if nothing more, and there has been a strenuous effort to maintain active navigation. There is a hopeful belief that the future will see the rivers again teeming with boats, as they do in Russia, Austria and France. But the logic of statistics is against it.

Miss Agnes Miller, of Chicago, speaks to young women about dangers of the Menstrual Period.

"To Young Women:—I suffered for six years with dysmenorrhea (painful periods), so much so that I dreaded every month, as I knew it meant three or four days of intense pain. The doctor said this was due to an inflamed condition of the uterine appendages caused by repeated and neglected colds.

"If young girls only realized how dangerous it is to take cold at this critical time, much suffering would be spared them. Thank God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that was the only medicine which helped me any. Within three weeks after I started to take it, I noticed a marked improvement in my general health, and at the time of my next monthly period the pain had diminished considerably. I kept up the treatment, and was cured a month later. I am like another person since. I am in perfect health, my eyes are brighter, I have added 12 pounds to my weight, my color is good, and I feel light and happy."—Miss Agnes Miller, 25 Potomac Ave., Chicago, Ill. — $5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

A BEAUTIFUL YOUNG SOCIETY WOMAN'S LETTER.

St. Paul, Minn.
521 Wabasha St.

Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.,

Dear Sir: "I took Peruna last summer when I was all run down, and had a headache and backache, and no ambition for anything. I now feel as well as I ever did in all my life, and all thanks is due to your excellent Peruna."—Bess F. Healy.

The symptoms of summer catarrh are quite unlike in different cases, but the most common ones are general lassitude, played-out, tired-out, used-up, run-down feelings, combined with more or less heavy, stupid, listless, mental condition. Relish for food and the ability to digest food seems to be lost.

Skin eruptions, sallow complexion, biliousness, coated tongue, fitful, irregular sleep, help to complete the picture which is so common at this season.

Peruna so exactly meets all these conditions that the demand is so great for this remedy at this season of the year that it is nearly impossible to supply it.

Peruna Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring the drug habit.

Thousands of women suffer from pelvic catarrh and catarrhal nervousness and don't know it. If you feel fagged out, begin at once taking Dr. Hartman's Peruna. It will relieve your catarrhal affliction and all your organs will be restored to health. Buy a bottle today, as it will immediately alleviate your case.
