of Plutocracy." It has a strikingly familiar sound. Articles of like tenor could be found in Populist newspapers along in the early nineties. What those newspapers saw would be a menace to the Nation at that time is now being voiced by newspapers of the Oregonian's calibre. If the great newspaper of the country had taken up the work of defending the people's interests a dozen or more years ago as they are now doing, we would not be in the danger, as a people, from the encroachments and usurpations, that the Oregonian's article indicates. Such articles inspire a feeling of thankfulness in the minds of all students of political matters who could see the trend of plutocratic methods at the beginning of the last decade of the nineteenth century. If these great newspapers would have done the work at that time that they are now doing, such heroic treatment as now seems necessary to curb the aggressions of the plutocrats would not be required.

Governor Pattison, of Ohio, is dead. His death was caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. The Governor had been a sick man from the day of his inauguration last Fall or Winter. He was one of the reform Democrats whose election was due to Republican bossism and corruption. Ohio is nominally very largely Republican, yet in these days of political independence the people saw the necessity of revolutionizing political affairs and, unmindful of the party lash, proceeded to do so. The people all over the Nation are becoming aroused to the fact that Country is greater than Party; that all honesty and patriotism is not confined to the Republican party and that an honest Democrat is more worthy of trust and confidence than a dishonest, grafting Republican and vice versa.

CONCRETE—ITS RISE AND ITS APPLICATIONS.

The history of concrete dates back to the Roman period, and its growth seems to have followed and is proportional to the progress of the Portland cement industry. The word "concrete" to engineers and contractors has a very definite meaning. It is a mixture of sand, gravel, and cement, and is called "concrete" because it is a mixture of concrete materials. It is a mixture of concrete materials, and is called "concrete" because it is a mixture of concrete materials. It is a mixture of concrete materials, and is called "concrete" because it is a mixture of concrete materials.

A TRIP TO JACKSONVILLE.

Last week the editor of the News and his better half made a short visit to Jacksonville, Jackson County. Boarding the Overland Limited train at Albany just a few minutes before midnight on Thursday night of last week, we of course saw none of the country through which we were passing until we reached Roseburg, Douglas County, at daylight. Here our train was cut in two in order to make mountain loads for the engines. Even after this was done it required two engines for each section to pull the trains over the heavy mountain grades. Our car was attached to the second section, of which Albert Cole, formerly of Scio, was rear brakeman and flagman. We are under obligations to Mr. Cole for making our trip from Roseburg South very pleasant indeed. Soon after leaving Roseburg the famous Cow Creek Canyon is entered. The road follows this canyon for over 40 miles. Here and there we noticed where landslides had occurred. At one point the slide was of such magnitude that it filled the canyon many feet deep, damming up the creek. The railroad found it necessary to build new track at that point. All along the canyon evidences of mining could be seen. Now and then the black, snake-like giant appeared, with the water rushing therefrom in sufficient force to wash anything away. All of the mines on Cow Creek are placer, but as to their quality we did not learn. Coming down into the Rogue River, the thriving city of Grants Pass is reached. Judging from the brief view we obtained from the train, the city must contain fully 3500 inhabitants. A large percentage of the business houses are brick buildings. Streets are well kept and evidences of thrift seemed to exist on every hand. Soon after leaving the Pass city the road takes its way along Rogue River. On every bar on this stream evidences of the miner's search for gold exists. Soon we reached Central Point, a town of considerable importance, situated in the widest part of the valley. Four or five miles more brought us to Medford, probably the most thriving city in Southern Oregon. New buildings could be seen going up in many sections of the city. Good brick business houses, good streets, a handsome, well kept park, a fine display of Jackson County fruits and vegetables in a building erected for the purpose of the depot grounds, was an evidence that the people of Medford are fully alive, progressive and up-to-date. Changing cars to the Rogue River Valley Railway, we reached Jacksonville just at noon.

Jacksville is the oldest town in Southern Oregon and one of the oldest in the State. In the old stage days Jacksonville was the chief stage station of this part of the State. It is also one of the old-time mining towns and active mining enterprises are being carried on at several points at the present time, principally in quartz. Within one and one-half miles of town a fine 20-stamp mill is in continual operation, night and day. The machinery is of the latest improved, modern pattern, and the building constructed in a very substantial manner. We did not learn the amount of gold per ton the ore yielded, but presume it pays the company a handsome profit. Jacksonville is the County seat of Jackson County. Nearly every business house is constructed of brick, but mostly old-fashioned in style, and very substantial. The town contains probably 800 people and is very healthfully situated in a nook up against the mountains, on the Western side of Rogue River Valley. Quite a number of wealthy men live here, some of whom, we were told, were millionaires. We noticed a number of elegant residences, well kept lawns, etc. A large, new brick school building, nicely located, shows that educational matters are not neglected. Jacksonville contains probably 800 permanent residents besides a considerable floating population caused by the mines. Being a mining town, as to all places of business including saloons and gambling houses, prevails. We could not distinguish any difference between Sunday and any other day, so far as business was concerned. Among the business men we noticed a number of names of early settlers which are prominently connected with the early history of Oregon. Taken altogether, Southern Oregon has the appearance of being quite prosperous. Mining and fruit-raising are probably the leading industries, though considerable farming is carried on. Haying was in full progress. Alfalfa, clover and such crops as are not for the farm are grown for hay. Dairying is also carried on to some extent. A person making a visit to Jacksonville need not at any time feel bored. There is always the old prospector or stage driver at hand, ready to talk by their fireside, and to tell some very interesting stories, too, relative to mining in early days, and matters connected with the old overland stage days. Material for a book could be gathered from these interesting old-timers that would be both interesting and valuable from a historical viewpoint. At about 4 p. m. Monday morning we boarded the train for our return, leaving Jacksonville with many pleasant thoughts. As we passed through Grants Pass we observed that the entire town was dressed in gold attire in honor of the convening of the Grand Army reunion and state encampment that convened there that day. Southern Oregon has many points of interest and is well worth visiting. Land, because of the fertility for fruit raising is very valuable ranging in prices from $50 to $100 per acre. One could build a very pleasant home down here, providing he had plenty of money.

Woman's Trials.

The bitter trail in a woman's life is to be a childless. Who can tell how hard the struggle may have been to have a child to love and to begeth to her? The absence of this link to bind marital life together is a common source of sorrow and unhappiness. Many unfortunate couples become estranged thereby. Even if they do not drift apart, one may read the whole extent of their disappointment in the eyes of such a childless couple when they rest on the children of others. To them the largest family does not seem too numerous. In many cases of barrenness or childlessness the obstacle to child-bearing is easily removed by the cure of weakness or restoring health and fruitfulness to many barren women, to the great joy of the household. In other, but rare cases, the obstruction to the bearing of children has been found to be of a surgical character, but easily removable by painless operative treatment at the Invaluable Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., over which Dr. Pierce of the "Favorite Prescription" fame presides. In all cases where children are desired and are absent, an effort should be made to find out the real cause, since it is generally so easily removed by Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is the most certain remedy for such cases, especially for woman's use. The ingredients of which the "Favorite Prescription" is composed have received the most positive endorsement from the leading medical writers on Menstrual Matters of all the several schools of practice. All the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper enclosing the bottle, so that any woman making use of this medicine will know exactly what she is taking. Dr. Pierce takes his patients into his full confidence, which he is pleased to do, and the formula after which the "Favorite Prescription" is made will bear the most careful examination. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best and safest laxative for women.
