LOST IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Albany People Spent a Stormy Night in Quest of Timber Claims.

An Albany special dispatched to the Oregonian states: After one of the most trying though untiring trips in an effort to secure a timber claim under the timber and stone act that have been made since the timber locators began reaping their harvest in Oregon, Mrs. E. D. Conick, wife of a prominent Albany banker, and Allan and William Steinhauser, of Albany, have arrived home.

The party went to Grant's Pass several days ago in response to word that some claims were ready for location in the mountains near that place. When they arrived at the Southern Oregon town they started with a timber locator for the mountains, several miles distant, and had penetrated into the trackless forest before they discovered the alleged locator was not familiar with the country.

After searching for many hours for the necessary survey posts, etc., to secure claims, and failing in their efforts, the party started to retrace their steps to the mountain trail. Then it was that their hardships began in earnest. The locator was unable to conduct them to the trail, and the party wandered about in an effort to reach a settlement and shelter.

Darkness overtook them, and the locator started out alone to find the way out and secure food for his charges. The three Albany people spent the night in the woods in a fierce storm of rain and sleet, without shelter or food.

During the night a large pine tree that had been hollowed out in some way was found, and some protection from the storm secured. On the following morning the party succeeded in reaching civilization, exhausted and wet, and secured food for the charges. The three Albany people spent the night in the woods in a fierce storm of rain and sleet, without shelter or food.

That Calico Ball. A News representative was present at a short time last Saturday evening at the Ladies' Terpolcheroan Calico Ball and from our vantage point the affair was a splendid success. Some 40 or 50 numbers were sold and the large, fine hall was roomy enough for all to dance at once.

For His Sister's Honor. A Portland young man by the name of Murray last Monday shot to death another young man by the name of Whitney, because the latter refused to marry his (Murray's) sister, to whom she attributes her ruin, under a promise of marriage. The killing may satisfy in the killer his hostility to the killed in a measure, but how can it save his sister's honor, by forever making it impossible for Whitney to repair the wrong he did the young lady. Many people will justify Murray in his action and say he ought not to be punished for that homicide. If any possible good can result, if the example would deter other young men from committing like crimes, there might be some sort of justification for the murder. But the death of this young man will have no deterrent effect upon others. The preventive must commence with the childhood training of the young man and young woman or even earlier.

Are Facetious. A number of our contemporaries, the Albany Herald being one of them, are inclined to be facetious at the expense of our City Council for the enactment of Ordinance No. 32, and act as if they had discovered something new under the sun. Don't get gay, gentlemen! The Council simply gives the latest up-to-date definition of the term "common drunk." But we presume as the definition is not copyrighted, you are at liberty to incorporate it in a like law or to use it in any way you deem best. But gentlemen, use it gently we beg of you. However, the News has a genuine grievance to file against this same Ordinance No. 32. One of our subscribers has taken it for what he terms "A Whiskey Editorial," and says "stop my paper," so you see gentlemen, when you grow facetious, the News gets in the sack. So don't, we beseech you, add insult to injury.

A Lively Runaway. Last Sunday evening a commercial traveler was unloading a young lady from his buggy in this city, in which they had been driving. As he was assisting the lady to alight the team started up. The commercial man and woman at the same time attempted to get hold of the bridle reins of one of the horses. The horse kicked and landed about the stomach of the astonished C. M. laying him out, while the team started South at a lively gait. By the use of the telephone line the team was stopped about four miles south of town. Damage: Only one 40-oz. in a wheel broken and a lady jarred up at E. M., though not sufficient to deter him from business on the following morning.

A Lively Spin. Monday evening while the Solo stage was awaiting the arrival of the West-bound C. & E. train at Munkers, the Northbound S. P. overland came thundering through. The stage team must have taken umbrage at the overland for rushing by without stopping, and started for Shelburn to ascertain the why and wherefore of the overland's action. Ira Richardson, the driver, does not state whether the team or the train made the better time, but he is fully aware of the fact that he had to walk home. The team was stopped at Shelburn.

Now the Main Line. Pending the replacing of the Jefferson railroad bridge, the Woodburn-Springfield branch of the S. P. is now the main line for the Oregonian trains. The train crossover from the main line at Albany to Shelburn and thence by the Oregonian branch to Woodburn. This arrangement will continue until the Jefferson bridge, one span of which is in the river, can be placed in commission. Five or six trains daily make and Albany appear quite lively about West Side.
