KILLED BY THE CARS.

The Miller harvester had a breakdown yesterday afternoon at the McGuire farm, and, with Charles Cox's team, Eli Miller and seven or eight of the hands, came to town to secure repairs for it. Between 6 and 7, almost the latter, they started home down the street, on the way meeting with a thrilling experience.
Just as they got to the Corvallis & Eastern switch that goes down to the mills, they discovered an engine showing three cars, with two behind it, down to the mill. The horses were frightened and sprang forward. Rocky Conner was driving, and stayed with the team, holding the horses ahead. The men rushed to the rear of the wagon and jumped off. The last one to do so was Willard Truax, who, on account of his left leg being paralyzed, could only limp along, and he jumped in the middle of the track and fell. Just then the freight car struck the wagon about 11 feet from the rear and ran upon young Truax, who lay with his head and body between the rails, which the wheels of the first car ran over between the knee and body.
The engineer saw the situation and heard the screaming and stopped as soon as possible, with Truax lying at the end of the first car. He was at once taken out and everything possible done for him.
Dr. Davis and Wallace and Russell Wallace came and bandaged the crushed leg and he was taken in the ambulance to St. Mary's Hospital. Besides the right leg, the left leg and left arm were both broken. The car rolled him over once, and it was a wonder he was not killed instantly. As it was, he lived until 8 o'clock, when he breathed his last. The train was the Corvallis & Eastern from the front, Elmer Danna's, conductor, the men in charge of it doing everything possible, when they saw the situation, to divert the accident.
Willard Truax was a son of Mrs. H. M. Truax, residing six miles east of Albany. Mr. Truax died about a year ago, and a few months ago Mrs. Truax lost a daughter. The boy was 16 years of age. On account of his paralyzed leg he had been given charge of the water wagon.—Tuesday's Democrat.

REFERENDUM PETITIONS STAND.

On Tuesday the supreme court handed down three decisions that are of vital importance. This opinion maintains the well known principle in law that the actual intent of the litigants is what counts and that the omission of some mere technicality does not destroy the value of the contention. In this instance the people had filed three referendum petitions with the secretary of state, in which the necessary number of signatures were obtained, to cause to be referred to the people next June.
The three petitions that Judge Galloway decided invalid were: "The compulsory pass bill," "The Multnomah county prisoners' board bill," and "The University of Oregon appropriation bill." All three of these measures have been pronounced good and sufficient by Justice Eakin.
The "Multnomah prisoners' board bill," of course affects only Multnomah county alone and with which the rest of the state has nothing to do. The "Compulsory pass bill" was of present minor importance, as the railroads, we understand, have refused to issue the passes. But the "University of Oregon appropriation bill" is one of vital importance to the people of Oregon. The effectiveness of the Referendum law was at stake in this decision.
Had Judge Galloway been sustained in his decision, it is doubtful if another Referendum petition would have been filed with the secretary of state. Now the people have won out, and they will have the privilege of voting next June how and in what amounts their money will be expended.
The News will have more to say with reference to the appropriations bill in a future number. Suffice to say, the supreme court has been true to the people. It interprets law on a broad, honest basis in which a mere legal technicality is not allowed to set aside the plain intent of the people. In the estimation of this court the voice of the people is supreme, whenever it is expressed in a way that its intent is made plain. All honor to the Oregon Supreme court.

TRIALS OF A GAME POACHER.

An Albany special to the Oregonian, last Thursday says:
Benjamin Gooch, a young man living near Shelburn, has already had a record of 15 and faces further trouble as the result of killing Chippa pheasants out of season. Incidentally, both of Albany's justice courts are involved in the case with an alleged infringement of jurisdiction, and a sensational controversy among attorneys, which may carry the matter into the circuit court.
Gooch was arrested by Deputy Game Warden Munckers, of Albany, and Beale and Green of Portland. He agreed to come to this city Tuesday afternoon, for trial, and Deputy District Attorney Gale S. Hill filed a complaint against him in the court of Justice of the Peace L. L. Swan. The defendant did not appear at the time set, and while Munckers was on searching for him, Attorney J. J. Whitney, who had been retained to defend Gooch, drew up another complaint, which was signed by Fred Gooch, the defendant's father, as private prosecutor, and filed in the court of Justice of the Peace O. E. Porter. There Whitney, acting as attorney for young Gooch, entered a plea of guilty for his client, and Justice Porter fined him $15 and costs, which was paid.
Deputy District Attorney Hill refused to recognize this procedure, to which the state was not represented, and caused John Catlin to be sent to Shelburn to re-arrest Gooch. Justice Swan decided that the procedure before Justice Porter while a complaint was pending in Swan's court was illegal, and that Gooch should have to stand trial on the original complaint.

THE SHIRKER.

Not a pretty name, is it?
Are you one?
Do you daily refuse to give your best efforts?
Do you pay your taxes—do you do anything day by day which will help your neighbors and fellow citizens?
By even a smile or a kind word? Do you?
If not, you are a shirker.
It means the man who can and will not pay his debts—the man who buys cocktails with the money needed to support his wife and family the man who follows the races and then tells his creditors to call again. It means the man who beats the butcher and the baker, and can still find change enough to treat the boys.
This definition is not broad enough for the name of shirker.
He is found in any quantity of garbs, from the cloth down to the card sharp. He belongs to an ignoble fraternity.
Are you a member?
If you are doing the best that you can—giving an honest day's work for an honest day's pay, an honest thought for the morrow, a helping hand for the needy with ut fear, and a clear conscience—if you do your best, you are not a shirker.—25c.

SCIO AINS OUT.

The third and last of a series of three ball games between the Scios and "Fairmoons" of Salem, occurred on the Scio diamond last Sunday. As each of the teams had won a game in the previous meets, this deciding game was a hard fought one from beginning to finish. The Salem team had been strengthened somewhat from the aggregation that had played in the former games, which made them about as nearly equal as one could wish.
The line up was as follows:
Salem.....Phillips
Scio.....A. Clark
Gooch.....Humphrey
John Wesely.....Kuton
Case.....Cary
Bennett.....Aornbackle
Joe Wesely.....Fry
Cain.....Welch
Miller.....A. Clark
Scio was the first to cross the plate in the third inning by getting two tallies. In the fourth, however, Salem scored her first run, and in the seventh scored her second run, which tied the score. In the eighth canto, Scio another run, and this eventually proved to be the winning run, as neither team succeeded in getting a man across the home plate thereafter.
Score by innings:
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Scio.....0 0 2 0 0 0 0 1 0—3
Salem.....0 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0—2
The game was interesting from start to finish. The Salem, as well as the Scio boys, are all gentlemen, and Scio gave them a cordial welcome.

BEDS WANTED.

During the fair a large number of people will have to be provided with lodging. The hotels can take care of but a limited number, and the only recourse is for our citizens to open their homes to the overflow. Therefore, anyone who has a bed to spare, if they will list them at this office, we will see that they are provided with nice, respectable lodgers.

GETS FIVE YEARS.

Louis Glass, the convicted San Francisco briber, has been sentenced to serve five years at the San Quentin penitentiary. Of course, the usual delays will be invoked by his attorneys in the way of appeals, etc., but it is safe to say, in the end, this Pacific States Telephone bribe giver will be found looking at the world through iron bars.
Glass is, comparatively, an old man, and is wealthy. His crime of bribery was incurred by bribing San Francisco supervisors to prevent a rival telephone company (The Home) from engaging in business in that city. Well, the "Home" is in San Francisco, and Glass is nearing the door of the penitentiary, where he will spend probably the remainder of his days in confinement for the good of society. Truly, the way of the transgressor is hard, sometimes.
