SANTIAM FARE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SANTIAM NEWS:
 C. C. Griffin, of Portland, is spending holiday week, with his mother Mrs. S. W. Gaines.
 Mrs. Rebecca Morris, of Albany, is over visiting her brother, J. P. Crabtree, and another sister. She will visit Woodburn before she returns home.
 Lee Wilson and family, returned from a visit to his daughter at Springfield, last Saturday.
 The high water created and havoc with our road near Crabtree bridge. Drift wood and sand holes makes the road impassable.
 A Grimes was a Lebanon visitor, last Saturday nevertheless the continuous downpour of rain.
 The writer's pig, butchered two May pigs of pure Jersey stock, each weighing 200 or 300 pounds—16 salted and 5 pounds of sausage resulted from the trimmings.
 Miss Rose and John Crabtree, and Ernest Litt and wife, went to Liberty school house, last Saturday night, to a basket social. Becoming water bound, they had to stay over until Monday, before they reached home.
 David Horsburg has had the misfortune to lose one of his fine Jersey cows. Apparently well in the morning, she was found dead in the evening, without any cause being developed.
 Mrs. John Crabtree and sister, Miss Lulu Turner, of Tennessee, were over Friday, visiting their mother, Mrs. Phoebe Turner.
 Lawrence Poindexter has lately received a very fine violin, from the East.
 John B. Crabtree has returned from a holiday visit to his uncle, over on Beaver Swale.
 Phil Wallace is making extensive improvements to his residence, yard, etc. Can it be that he has something in his head that will cause a change in his life?
 Wishing you a happy new year, Mr. Editor, I am as ever,
 FIE EATER

AL. COLE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Last Sunday night, Al. Cole, well known in Scio, was terribly injured, in the railroad yards at Roseburg. He was checking up train No. 16, north bound when a light switch engine backing up on a siding struck him in the back. He fell with his arm on the track and it was cut off close to the body. His face was, also, badly mangled.
 Mr. Cole was at once placed on the train he was checking up and taken to Portland.
 Albert is an old time employee of the News editor, and to whom the Scio Press plant was sold. Mr. Cole then (nearly 11 years ago) commenced the publication of the SANTIAM NEWS. About one year afterwards, he disposed of the newspaper and plant and entered the S. P. railroad service as brakeman.

TERMINATED FATAALLY.

Dr. J. W. Cole arrived in Scio Wednesday evening and gave us the following facts:
 When Albert reached Portland on Monday morning, he was at once removed to the Good Samaritan hospital, and was operated on during the day.
 The shock of the injury, and delay from having his injuries properly looked after together with the effects of the anesthetic, resulted fatally on Tuesday morning, just 36 hours from the time of his injury. His mother was at his bedside when he breathed his last, his wife having been overcome with the shock, could not remain in his presence.
 The body attended by his family and delegations of railroad employees from both Roseburg and Portland, arrived in Scio, about 4 P. M. on Thursday. A short service was held at the Christian church, the burial occurring immediately thereafter in Franklin Butte cemetery.
 Albert Cole was born in Scio 37 years and 6 months ago, and grew to manhood principally in this city. His education was obtained in the public schools and printing office. Some 15 years ago he was married to Miss Maud Wiley, who with four children survive him, and with his parents, Dr. J. W. Cole and Mrs. Cole of Amaville, his sister, Mrs. Ida Veal of Albany, and brother Ernest Cole, of Monmouth, attended the last sad rites of the husband, father, son and brother. Mrs. Anna North, of Kitt. Wash., his youngest sister, could not be present.

This concludes the final chapter of another railway tragedy. As nearly as we could learn, Albert was attending strictly to his duty, when he was struck down without warning. It is said there was no light on the engine that, by backing up, struck him, and was its bell ringing. Someone blundered and Albert Cole added one more to the long list of railway victims whose sacrifice, seemingly is needless.
 Further, in times, these needless accidents will, by a measure, be abated, by greater care and protection to employees. But their recurrence is so frequent, too many lives pay the penalty of defective equipment or criminal carelessness of employees.

DID NOT LIKE TEXAS.

From a private letter to Clarence Rex from E. B. Loh, who recently left Scio to go to Texas, we glean the following:
 "I did not mind my car in the country you wrote about (Texas). The country along the railroad looked very low, and I soon learned that this particular section was not a farming country. They said it was due to fruit and vegetables; but I wanted a country where I could raise hay and corn for the horse.
 I had the misfortune to lose my leg on a train. He was sick two weeks.
 It is snowing this morning (Dec 17), but the weather has been very mild since I came here (Okmulgee Oklahoma). We have had but very thin ice so far.
 I sympathize with you in the loss of your father. He was a good citizen and is surely missed by all.
 I have not yet decided definitely where I will locate; but shall probably remain here for a year.

WERE PINCHED OFF.

Last Friday afternoon George Garland came into town, his son driving. As George had his hand tied up with blood stains on the wrappings and had headed direct for Dr. Prill's office, the News man smelled an item and at once proceeded to investigate. Mr. Garland was at once placed upon the operating chair, and the hand, (his right) was unwrapped. The second and third fingers were shown to be minus their ends, and the bloody stumps were anything but pleasant to the beholder, and undoubtedly, most painful and unpleasant to George.
 Mr. Garland and son were engaged in hauling board bolts from the timber to the wood shed. Mr. Garland was piling them up and his son tugging them in. By some means the sharp end or corner of a bolt caught the two digits, amputating them as completely as is done with a knife, though not so smoothly.
 Dr. Prill dressed the wounds properly and made George as comfortable as possible; but it will be several weeks before George will be ready for work again, and he will always have two less fingers to care for.

ANGORA GOAT SHOW.

The Ninth Annual Angora Goat Show.

of the Polk County Mohair Association, will occur at Dallas on January 15, 16 and 17. This Polk county goat show has arisen from being a mere local importance, to that of nearly national note in that visitors from all parts of the nation, interested in breeding the Angora goat, attend the exhibition. It has also, stimulated Oregon breeders to higher and better ideals in the goat industry.

WE SHALL SEE.

From the beginning there has been a struggle over the question of who should wield the power in government. It began when primitive men grouped themselves together for mutual protection, it is in progress now and it will continue until the mountains fall. It grows out of the effort of the strong few to rule the weak many and the latter's resistance thereto. The contest has been waged in every government that ever existed, at least wherever there was the slightest degree of enlightenment among the feeble masses. History is red with the rivers of blood that have been poured out in the ceaseless struggle. The soil of hapless Russia is so awfully red from the attempt of the apparently impotent masses to wring back from the monarch and his oligarchy of aristocracy the inalienable and precious rights that are the Russian people's by the gift of God and nature.

Even in free America the inevitable effort of the cunning and strong few to arrogate to themselves rights that they deny to others is perpetually manifest. It is the product of that innate selfishness that will be a dominating trait in the human mind. The struggle over it in this country is seen in the group of statesmen who wanted the federal government so framed that the masses would have but little participation in it and with the powers to be exercised by a few of the better educated and wealthier classes. It is seen to-day, for instance, in the desire of predatory and piratical wealth to prevent United States senators from being elected by the people. It is seen in the attitude of the senators themselves, who for 30 years have stubbornly resisted the plan. Their belief is that the participation in the election of a United States senator is a right with which the people ought not to be trusted. In their selfishness they are so insistent that here in Oregon, after there has been adopted a law by which every citizen has the right to participate in the selection of a senator, the people are asked to give up their right. Even after the satisfactory exercise of this right through application of Statement No. 1, in the selection of two senators, there is a cunning attempt here to induce each citizen to give up his new privilege, so that senators may be selected, not by the mass, but by the few. The question is, will the citizen suffer himself to be fooled by the blatherings and flappings of a conservative politician, and give up an important right that he has fairly won—a right that is the envy of the citizens of many other states? We shall see—Oregon Journal.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.
 Blood makes individuality, get and feeding developed.
 The secret of success in stock raising is simplicity in quality.
 Make it a rule to save everything, the excess of water does not cost more than it is worth.
 Market price is always in accord with food value as determined by the chemist.
 Fast walkers are much more needed than fast trotters and they perform a much more important part in the industrial economy of the country.
