GOVERNOR FOLK IN OREGON

His Speech in Part Delivered Before an Eastern Oregon Audience

Governor Folk will speak in Albany at the Chautauqua, next Sunday. On his way thither he made a powerful speech in the interest of good, anti-graft and honest government, of which we give below a portion. As many of our citizens as can should go over to the county seat and hear this man who has made grafters and rogues tremble both as prosecuting attorney at St. Louis and as governor of Missouri:

"Some of you may think if the government were left entirely to you, public evils would not exist. But you have a portion of the responsibility now. If you are unfaithful in part would you be more faithful with all? He that is faithless with a portion cannot be trusted with the whole. If each citizen were to leave the remedying of public wrongs to someone else nothing would be accomplished. There is sometimes too much of a disposition to allow others to do the face sweating in civic affairs while they do the bread eating.

"Our government in theory gives more rights than any other, but some think so little of their obligation to the general welfare that they are indifferent to being robbed so long as they do not feel the effects directly and are among the many. The sin of republics is lawlessness. In a monarchy the government is sustained by the power of the crown. In a republic the government rests entirely on the law which a majority of the people make for themselves. The weight of law means the rules of the people.

"The moral revolution that is now sweeping over the land is merely a revival of the rule of the people.

"The welfare of the city or state should always be the first and highest consideration. Some of you may belong to this party and some belong to that party, but all should be patriots. Be patriots before you are anything else. The people as the average voter, you and I, are responsible for the future of this government. If the American republic is to survive it must be saved by the efforts of the patriotic citizens who want nothing for themselves but the advantages that accrue from the general public weal. If the public learn to appreciate this, learn to know the dangers that threaten our future, and learn the strength that rests with the voters, the future of this government is assured.

"I am not an alarmist, and I do not believe that the United States of America will cease to exist as a republic today or tomorrow. We have lasted for 134 years—a long time when compared with the average period of one man's public activity, but short in the history of nations. Venice had a republican form of government for 1000 years; and Athens lasted 900 years, though there were intermissions during that time. Florence was a republic for 300 years and Rome for 500 years. These governments were once great factors in civilization, and their citizens probably thought they would last forever, that nothing could overthrow them. We are likely to harbor similar ideas, and it is possible that they will prove to be wrong.

"The conditions that caused the downfall of those old republics, now almost forgotten, were the same conditions that will cause the downfall of the American republic, if it is not to endure. The dangers lie in the hearts of the people.

"Too many are indifferent and this indifference of voters is the greatest menace to a republican form of government. Arouse the voters to an understanding of the danger, convince them that they are personally and directly concerned, get them moving once and they are invincible. But while most people are honest they are inactive so, while the vicious minority are perniciously active. It is not enough to be merely honest, the good citizen should be aggressive in his opposition to graft and corruption. Lawbreakers have nothing to fear from passive opposition but they must yield to active and aggressive fighters. We need more fighters in the army of peace. We must fight for everything that is worth having, we must fight against everything that is bad. The farmer must not only be personally opposed to weeds, but he must cut them down and make an active warfare against them or his crops will be ruined. In governmental affairs the same relations exist between good and evil and between the useful grain that must be sown and cared for, and worthless thistles and weeds that will spring up of their own accord anywhere. A government neglected will no more become good than a neglected field will grow corn or wheat.

"There are no 'necessary evils' in government. It is the abuses of government about which all good citizens have a right to complain. Those who have profited about the abuses are usually the loudest in the denunciation of those who point out abuses in public affairs.

"While the people are to blame where public abuses exist officials who wink at the violation of the laws are nevertheless, culpable. Good government depends more upon the man behind the law itself. The law is merely the weapon for officials to use, and without official laws would be as useless as a cannon in war without men. When an official takes an oath to enforce a law, he has no right to violate the oath, and excuse the nonenforcement of certain laws because they are or seem to be unpopular. Sentiment may be against the enforcement of some laws, but an official does not take an oath to support public sentiment, he does take an oath to support the law. Public sentiment is a difficult thing to ascertain. Law abiding people are quiet while the lawless are so vociferous as to deceive by their clamor the facts as to their number. The only correct way to determine sentiment is to be guided by the expression of the people's will through the lawmaking body. When a law is passed it must be assumed it is what the people want, and it should be enforced until the people demand and secure its repeal. What may seem to be public sentiment is often the clamor of the lawless who have a selfish interest in violating the law.

"Civic interests cannot exist where the public conscience is aroused. The exposures recently brought about in different places would have come years ago if the people had been aroused to a true understanding of the situation. Had the people been alert and had they taken as much interest in municipal affairs as they would have taken in a corporation in which they were stockholder the disgraceful conditions would never have existed.

"Much has been done for good government during the past few years. But we should not be content with what has been accomplished in the fight against public evils. There is plenty of work yet to be done. States, like men, should never be satisfied, but should ever strive for a higher development. The man who is so self satisfied as to pronounce himself undesirous of further improvement is likely to be most in need of advancement.

"The future of our government rests upon the integrity of the citizen and upon his activity in public affairs. Good government must begin at home, in cities and towns and proceed from there to state and nation. This government rests not on the wealth of a few, but on the character and integrity of the average individual.

PORTLAND NAVAL RESERVE

Portland Plans Great Annual Apple Show for the Whole State

Portland, Ore., July 12.—An annual apple show that will reach big proportions has been determined on for Portland. The first such exhibit will be held in November and it is expected to have the entire state represented in a way never before attempted. The Commercial Club, business men and hotel men's association have all entered heartily into the project at the instance of the Oregon State Horticultural Society, which proposes to celebrate its quarter centennial this fall by inaugurating a big annual apple fair that is expected to grow with each passing year until it attains proportions where it will attract national interest.

Oregon, in addition to an efficient state militia, is to have an organization of Naval Reserves. Steps have already been taken to form such an organization, which will maintain the same relation to the navy in time of war that the militia does to the army. Ex-navy men and others interested formed a temporary organization at Portland during the past week. This will be made permanent as soon as possible.

Hibernians from all over the United States will visit Portland next week, coming to attend the annual convention of the A. O. H., which opens here July 19. It is estimated that no less than 20,000 people from all parts of the country will come to Portland at that time, attracted by the convention and the favorable rates made on account of it.

Willamette valley dairymen are to have the chance of listening to one of the greatest experts in dairying in the world, when Prof. Bernhard Boeggild, of the Royal Danish Agricultural College at Copenhagen arrives here on July 18. Oregon City, Corvallis, Salem, Albany, Forest Grove and McMinnville will be visited and the commercial clubs will entertain the visiting expert. He is studying American dairy conditions and he will no doubt give many hints in his talks that will be of great value to the industry in Oregon.

Preliminaries for the annual livestock show and races at the Country Club grounds next September are now under way and the arrangements indicate this year's show will be more successful than ever. The fair will open on Labor Day and not only Portland people, but those of outside points are interested in its success.

Gray's Harbor people are talking over the project of building a canal from that waterway through Willapa Harbor to the Columbia river, thus giving a deep water, dependable channel to the sea. One meeting has already been held and the people are considering it seriously. It is said such a project will cost not over $1,000,000 and in addition to its aid to navigation, will drain a territory covering 10,000 acres of marsh land, now practically worthless.
