THE PERRY CARTER CO.

Will Be in Scio December 28, 1910, One of the Leading Cartoonists of America

Twelve and a half years of active service as a newspaper cartoonist preceded by other years of varied experience in the newspaper profession furnishes Mr. Carter with a wealth of material and gives him advantages possessed by no other lyceum cartoonist. For five years he made cartoons daily for the Minneapolis Times and in more recent years his work has appeared in the Minneapolis Tribune. His newspaper cartoons are known throughout the United States and Europe as well. In his characteristic style Mr. Wm. T. Stead, England's famous editor wrote: "In Mr. Perry Carter the Minneapolis Times has a very smart craftsman" and in August 1903 the American Monthly Review in discussing his work, says in part: We have this month found his cartoons of better average quality than those of any other cartoonist at home or abroad.

A LITTLE TALK ABOUT CHRISTMAS

Perhaps the most perplexing question confronting our people for the next two weeks will be "What shall I buy for Christmas?" The dealer who sells you holiday goods, is more or less responsible for that answer. If he has nothing for you to select from, other than useless trash which simply costs money, yet does not supply a need, then he is in the blame as well as yourself. If, on the other hand, he seeks to protect you by offering for sale only that which, in his judgement, will supply a need and make life more worth living, then he should be allowed credit in proportion for that service.

There are many things now-a-days which, while they are of real necessity, are gotten up in a way to render them very acceptable gifts. Among which are Stationery, Books, handbags, hand mirrors and numerous other things of a like character which will answer this perplexing question, "What shall I buy for Christmas?" and be a source of satisfaction, both to the giver and receiver.

Our book assortment is, in our judgement, the best selection of authors and subjects ever before offered our customers.

You are cordially invited to inspect them and judge for yourself. Trusting that you will not overlook this invitation, and wishing you a merry Christmas. I am yours truly,

A Poker Game

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"It all depends upon you, parson," said one of the party.

"Gentlemen," said the clergyman. "I protest against the fate of these poor negroes being left in my hands. One of you play for me."

But Morgan protested, and the clerical gentleman was obliged to play his own hand. Despite the blunders he made he held hands that enabled him to keep even. Morgan, seeing that his adversary was having a run of luck, ceased to bet till that run seemed to have ended, then made several apparent bluffs with the view of getting considerable money in the pot and taking it. Singularly enough, every time he tried this expedient the clergyman's hand laid over his own.

When several of these hands had been played $2,000 of the $2,400 was before the clergyman. Morgan began to look concerned. It seemed singular to him that a man who at the beginning of the game didn't know the value of the cards should have remained in the game and hold more than four-fifths of the whole sum invested. He cast several scrutinizing glances at his adversary's face, but it showed nothing other than piety and benevolence.

But finally each seemed to hold a hand that warranted high betting. Morgan opened with $50; the clergyman raised him $5. Morgan raised $150. The parson raised all Morgan had left, $200. Morgan had gone too far to withdraw. He "saw" his opponent and—lost.

The parson scooped up all the money there was on the table, and Morgan, cursing his luck, made out a bill of sale for the negroes.

"What name?" he asked of the minister.

"Peter Harbeson."

"You Pete Harbeson? Well, I've been done!"

Pete Harbeson was one of the most noted gamblers in the south. He had been employed by an "abolitionist" to secure the freedom of Morgan's negroes. They received free papers and went to Ohio.
