The Stayton Mail is keeping tally of the number of drunken men seen on the streets, there, since the opening of the saloons. If a like score had been kept during the "dry" days, an equally bad showing could have been made, if the reports were facts. In the last mentioned case the "drunks" were as strong an argument against no saloons as the "drunks" of last week were against saloons of the present. Be fair brother.

The annual Midwinter Number of The Times has been received and is more beautiful than ever. The art color work, the fine paper, the superb printing and the marvelous range of reading matter about Southern California and the Southwest make it exceedingly attractive as well as informing. The whole issue comprises over 200 pages, with sixty pages of illustrations from photographs. There are also a number of clever cartoons. The brilliantly executed color pages of scenery, products and phases of life in the Southland are especially appealing. Everybody who has seen the number is delighted with it; and as a matter of newspaper achievement it is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that this great number made its appearance Jan. 12, barely three months after The Times plant was destroyed by dynamite and fire.

OUR PORT- LAND LETTER

State Statistical Bureau Will Advance Oregon's
Interests—Low Colonist Rates

State development will receive a new impetus if House Bill No. 301, now before the Legislature, passes. This measure will create a statistical bureau and immigration agent and authentic statistics presenting the opportunities of Oregon will then be available for use by the various commercial organizations that are now without an official source for reliable data. A state booklet, furnishing facts about Oregon in concise form, will be the basis of extensive advertising.

The Oregon Development League will reprint a state booklet in large quantities. It is felt that the thousands who are inquiring about the advantages this state offers can best be supplied with information if it comes with the official stamp of the state, indicating its authoritative character. The railroads, also, will duplicate such a booklet by hundreds of thousands.

The bill now being considered was framed by the Oregon Development league to meet a general demand for a state publication. The measure provides that the immigration agent shall serve without pay but makes an appropriation of $25,000, barely the cost of compiling and printing a limited original edition of the booklet. Once available, such a publication will be duplicated widely.

That Oregon will double its present population during the next ten years is the prediction of Dr. Joseph Schafer, head of the department of history at the University of Oregon. He draws interesting parallels between the agricultural states of the Middle West and Oregon, which he says is now facing an era similar to that marking the periods of the heaviest settlement in the Mississippi Valley. He finds that Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and others doubled their population in ten year periods when people sought the cheap agricultural lands to be had there. He expects history to repeat itself in Oregon.

Pendleton is setting a good example of Western enterprise by starting early to put on a great show at the time of its annual "Round-Up." Liberal subscriptions are being made to build a race track and grandstands that will be ample for the occasion. A large tract of ground near the city has been purchased and the 1911 show promises to be a great success. Pendleton is attracting wide attention through its unique frontier celebration.

The double tracking of the O. W. R. & N. line down the Columbia river from Echo to Portland, as authorized this week by the Harriman directors in New York, will be of great benefit to the whole state. Improved transportation facilities will be provided, but, perhaps best of all, is the confidence shown in the Northwest by the great railway system in authorizing this heavy investment.

Usual low-priced colonist rates to the Pacific Northwest from the East will be in effect from March 10 to April 10 and will, no doubt, result in inducing many settlers to come West. Rates will be the same as last year, on the basis of $25 to the coast from Missouri river terminals. Fare from other points is in proportion.

The Portland Fair and Livestock Association has decided upon the same dates used last year for the meet next Fall and will open September 4. Large business interests of the city who are behind the project are supporting it generously and the coming show promises to be far more successful than any of the annual fairs so far held. It is expected to bring to Portland a large number of merchants and representative citizens from the entire country tributary to Portland at the time of the fair, making it an attraction of wide interest.

Most people argue that the home merchants and home mechanics should be patronized in preference to those of the outside. Yet a few people, who advocate this idea, if they think they can save 15 cents by sending elsewhere for their goods or whatever they desire, do so. Some do this when they are in need of job printing. But when they want some free advertising, they can come to the printer to do it, thinking that he knows nothing about sending to other points for their printing. But do not make a mistake in the matter. The NEWS is on to every merchant or other business man who sends out of the city for his printing.
