Many of the opponents of the proposed new city charter, are misrepresenting its provisions, without any pretensions of stating the facts. This is not fair, boys, and is sure to do your purpose an injury. No man can accomplish any permanent results by misrepresentations. Every voter can read the proposed charter and the election is a month off yet. Better stick to the truth.

The Panama Canal

But now the work is taking form, and with its completion we doubt not but the gathered nations that came to the opening ceremonies, with uncovered heads, will joyfully volunteer their evidence that among all the masterful works of men, nothing else compares with the completion of that canal, and for all time to come as succeeding generations of men look upon it, they will, referring to the builders, declare that "There were giants in those days."—Goodwin's Weekly, Salt Lake City.

Next week the NEWS will publish a story of early Kentucky history, not given in the ordinary histories, yet true to life, for it involves some of the Indian fights in which the great grandfather of the wife of the NEWS editor was involved. It is published for preservation, because the only manuscript describing the events, is now in a very dilapidated condition.

The Diaz (Mexican) government is making peace proposals to the Insurrectos, but they do not seem to be satisfied with the terms proposed. The action of the Diaz government indicates that the insurrection is much more formidable than the press dispatches have, here-to-fore indicated. Those Insurrectos seem to be fighting for a greater liberty. Such being the case, all citizens of the United States should extend to them their sympathies, at least.
