 Work on the Scio-West Scio road is progressing slowly on account of the frequent rains and the difficulty of getting rock ready for the crusher. About the time a supply of rock is obtained it rains and then the roads are impossible to haul over. The road which has been built is excellent but is costing too much for the amount constructed. It would perhaps, have been better to have used gravel instead of the crushed rock as a much longer piece of road could have been built with the same money. It might not have been as lasting, but there is a crying need for better roads at once clear thru to West Scio.

A Faithful Employee

 thousand employees that are now enjoying pensions from the Southern Pacific Company. The pension system is voluntary on the part of the railroad, length of service being the only requirement. However, a voluntary leave taking upon part of employees, should they remain in the company's employ for thirty or even less years, would cancel their right to a pension.
