THE PUBLIC HEALTH

One of the subjects discussed at the last council meeting is worthy of the most serious consideration of every citizen of Scio. We refer to that of public health. Our health department has been very negligent in enforcing the city ordinances governing matters pertaining to the general health. A number of the toilets in different parts of town have been allowed to get in unspeakably filthy condition during the summer and, while a few persons have been notified to make changes, there have been others that have received no attention at all, and some of the persons notified have failed to carry out the orders of the health officers. One of the officials said if they tried to force compliance that the property owner and all his friends would get mad.

Great Benjamin F! Is the health of the town to be menaced by a few persons too careless or indifferent to obey orders that common decency ought to have made unnecessary. The only possible objection any one could make to a clean up order would be that not all were included in the order who should have been. This can be avoided by the health board investigating conditions all over town.

The health of the people of Scio has been remarkably good in times past and as a result we are apt to get somewhat careless in enforcing our health laws. Some people are prone to think that what never has happened never will. They never have had typhoid fever and hence are sure they never will have. They never have died but it is very probable that they will some time. It is to be hoped that when the summons does come it will not be the result of preventable causes. Typhoid fever is more to be dreaded than smallpox—the kind of smallpox prevalent during recent years. There has also been one or two cases in Scio this fall. It is to be hoped they were contracted elsewhere but one cannot be sure.

The writer has lived in towns where typhoid fever every fall swept off dozens of the citizens and hopes never to see like conditions here. With a little common sense attention to health conditions Scio should continue to keep her fine record as one of the healthiest in the entire state.

Another matter which should be investigated by the health authorities at once is the purity of our city water. Samples should be sent to the state health board or elsewhere for analysis. It is reported that after a heavy rain some of the refuse from the slaughter house finds its way into the creek and thence in the water mains. If such be the condition it is intolerable. This is the only source of drinking water for our public school children and demands prompt investigation. The News does not say the water is impure. We do insist, however, that all doubt of its purity should be removed.

A Few Words About Style

FALL 1911

ANALYZE a woman's charm and you'll find a very large part of it is due to correct dress. It is the little intimate detail of dress that discloses the woman's personality, and the most important of these details are in her outer garments—her COAT and SUIT.

La Vogue Styles

are primarily Parisian modifications of leading accepted style vogues—Americanized innovations of the season's dressiest costumes.

Style corrections for these many seasons past have won for LA VOGUE garments the reputation of "The Standard of Style."

The styles shown in the La Vogue garments are true adaptations of the prevailing new fashion notes exploited this season by the foremost Paris dressmakers

Style Sources

Throughout the history of fashion, various countries of the Orient have given ideas for modern dress. This year, East India vogues furnish the inspiration for the favored novelty elements in dress.

These new style effects are having their influence on American fashion for autumn and winter wear—the LA VOGUE designs and patterns show these delicate modifications with a smartness, beauty and refinement.

Satisfaction

LA VOGUE garments are made of the best materials in all the latest fashionable shades—the fit, the fabric and workmanship will give pleasing satisfaction.

We have exclusive sale of these celebrated garments, and add our endorsement to the guarantee of the maker
