Daddy's Bedtime Story — When the Bees And Drones Went to Court

The Bees and Drones Go to Court

"YOU know," said daddy to Jack and Evelyn. "If you are not in bed promptly, you won't get any of that nice honey which Uncle Ben sent from the country. If you are good, I think we shall have some for breakfast, and as I am very fond of honey, I hope you will not be naughty and so keep me from getting my share."

"We'll be good," said Evelyn. "If you'll tell us a story about honey."

"Um, well, I'll tell you a story about bees. Once upon a time there was a hive (the bees' house is called a hive, you know) of fine fat bees. They worked hard and never wasted anything, but they couldn't get ahead because they had a lot of drones—lazy relations—living in the same house with them, and what the family didn't eat up the drones wasted. At last the head bee called all the other worker bees together and said: 'We've fed those lazy drones long enough. Now they just have to go to work!'

"But how are we going to make them work? one old bee asked. 'We've been trying as long as I can remember and they won't!'

"Well," said the head bee, "if they won't work we'll put them out."

"So the head bee and several of the old bees called the drones together and told them this:

"Humph!" said the head drone sarcastically. "I just see myself working!" So he and "I" and "I" and "I" exclaimed the other drones.

"If you don't we'll put you out," threatened the bees.

"Indeed you won't. This hive is our home quite as much as yours. You dare to put us out and we'll call in Policeman Humblebee and haul you all before Judge Owl!"

"The bees became angry and tried to put the drones out. So Judge Owl had to try patching up the squabble some way.

"At last he said he had made up his mind. He called the bees and drones before him.

"The court wishes to settle this matter in a just and proper manner," said he, with his most learned air. "The hive belongs to the makers of the honey. Now, I will set aside two empty hives—one for the bees and one for the drones. Whichever party first fills its hive with honey proves that it made the other honey and owns the other hive."

"The bees were much pleased, and although the drones moved into the new hives and for awhile pretended to be very busy, to this day they have not one drop of honey to show, so they have never got back into the big home hive."

Strange Industries in China.

In Taichow our correspondent saw some strange industries. One was the keeping of large stags, as big as a fair sized horse, reared for the sake of their horns, which are cut off every summer and sold for as much as $25 gold for use as medicine. The horn is soft, and the softer it is when removed the higher the price realized.

The other was the raising of the mink, a sort of large pheasant, the tail feathers of which are very valuable, as they are needed for the dress hats of mandarins. Timber is very plentiful in this district and is sent away by raft to all parts.—North China News.

The Bronx in New York.

Even in New York comparatively few residents know the origin of the name Bronx. It came from an early settler, Jonas Bronck, who, with two companions, sailed from Holland in the private armed ship Fire of Troy and arrived in New Amsterdam in July, 1639. Bronck at once obtained from the Dutch West India company a grant of 500 acres of land in what is now Westchester county, "lying between the Great Kill (the Harlem river) and the Ahquahung" (the Bronx river). An old "Tracing of Bronckland" is still preserved in the office of the secretary of state at Albany, and the location of Jonas Bronck's house is shown thereon.

Notice of Hearing of Final Account

Notice is hereby given that the final account of Jacob Bartnik as executor of the last will and testament of Wenzel Bollish, deceased, has been filed in the county court of Linn county, State of Oregon, and that the 4th day of December, 1911, at the hour of 9 o'clock a. m., has been duly appointed by such court for the hearing of objections to such final account and the settlement thereof, at which time any person interested in such estate may appear and file objections thereto in writing and contest the same.

The First Music.

The father of song, music and dancing, all three, was the savage who first clapped hands and shouted in time at some rude festival of his tribe. From that clapping and shouting has been evolved the whole art of instrumental music, including even the entrancing complexities of the modern symphony. From that shout or rudimentary emotional utterance has proceeded by a kindred evolution the whole art of vocal music down to the modern opera or oratorio. From the savage leap has come every variety of dancing, from the country breakdown to the beautiful waltzes of the city ballroom.—New York American.

Origin of "Pants."

The words breeches, trousers and pantaloons are now used interchangeably, but originally the significations were quite different. Pantaloons were at first nothing but long stockings worn in Italy as a sort of religious habit by the devotees of St. Pantalon. Breeches originally reached from the waist half way to the knee and finally to the knee, where they were fastened with a buckle. Trousers are the present style of leg gear, a combination of the former two.

Meeting of the Waters.

From Oct. 31 to Nov. 4, 1840, in France the Saone poured its waters into the Rhone, broke its banks, covered 60,000 acres and immersed a number of cities and villages. Six hundred and eighteen houses were carried away and many lives sacrificed. It was the first time in 238 years that the Saone had risen so high.

Queer Old Laws.

France in 1314 passed laws regulating the size of the cloak and robe, the breadth of the trimming and the number of suits possessed by each person; also the diet, including the hour of meals and the number of dishes.

Foreign Eccentricities.

"The people in these foreign hotels," said the young tourist, "have the queerest ways I ever saw."

"What's the matter now?"

"Why, I just now asked the clerk in French what news from America, and he replied that the Russian interpreter was out. I'd like to know what connection he thought there was between the two."—Lippincott's.
