Queer Old Laws.
France in 1214 passed laws regulating the size of the cloak and robe, the breadth of the trimming and the number of suits possessed by each person, also the diet, including the hour of meals and the number of dishes.

A Child's Odd Question.
Bobby (as the train plunges into a tunnel) Oh mamma, where's all the outside gone?—Boston Transcript.

RAINBOW BRIDGE.

Utah's Beautiful and Majestic Stone Arch Built by Nature.

Near the southeast corner of Utah, in a remote and well high inaccessible part of the Navaho reservation now given over to the use of the Putes, is situated a natural bridge, called by the Navahos Nonnezoshe, the stone arch, and by the Putes Barohoini, the rainbow, which surpasses any structure of its kind known to man. Even the other great bridges of southern Utah, the Caroline, the Augusta and the Edwin, are exceeded in size and beauty by the rainbow arch.

A towering arch, rainbow shaped, of wonderful symmetry, rises nearly sheer from a ledge on the one side and, spanning the stream, joins the opposite canyon wall on its downward curve, writes Joseph E. Pogue in the National Geographic Magazine. The opening, augmented by a gorge cut by the stream to a depth of eighty feet below the level of the supporting bench, measures a vertical distance of 267 feet, but the total height from stream bottom to the top of the arch is 309 feet, while the abutments at their base stand 278 feet apart. The causeway, upon which one may be lowered from an adjacent cliff, but whose sides are too steep to serve for a complete passage, is thirty-three feet wide and forty-two feet thick at its keystone point, and the limbs are not greatly in excess of these dimensions.

A mere recitation of figures must fail to convey an adequate idea of the imposing nature of the bridge. It is not the size alone, though this far exceeds the greatest masonry arches constructed by engineering skill, nor is it solely the graceful lines of curvature of maximum stability, but rather all of these, that combine to make this the most remarkable single arch now known. It would easily span, with room to spare, the dome of the capitol at Washington.

The arch is carved from a buff colored, fine grained sandstone, brick red upon its surface and stained with vertical streaks of a darker shade. Mostly massive, though in part oblique bedded, the rock is only moderately firm and is easily crushed beneath the blows of a hammer. Geologically it is a part of the upper La Plata sandstone, a formation of great thickness, deposited in jurassic time over a large portion of southeast Utah, southwest Colorado and northeast Arizona.

The origin of the arch is simple and evident. It was caused by the progressive narrowing of the neck of a meander entrenched between high and steep walls until an opening was made through the tongue of intervening rock, permitting the stream to cut off its meander by flowing beneath the arch thus formed.

Both Were at Home.

Two of the most eminent lawyers at the Philadelphia bar were Benjamin Harris Brewster and his half brother, Frederick Carroll Brewster. Both had held the office of attorney general for the state, and the first had been attorney general of the United States. They had not been on friendly terms for many years. It is said that on one occasion a mutual friend tried to bring them together, and finally Frederick C. consented to bury the hatchet and sent Benjamin H. a card containing his name, with the words written underneath, "At home on Monday evening, May 1." By the same messenger Benjamin H. sent a card in return, which read, "Benjamin H. Brewster, also at home Monday evening, May 1." This ended negotiations.

The Old Time Tankard.

The tankard is one of the oldest of drinking vessels. The old tankards were vessels of great capacity, and as they held more than one man could imbibe they were pegged—that is to say, they were divided into equal parts, each part being marked with a peg of wood or silver. Thus when several were drinking from the tankard, as was the custom, each was supposed to stop drinking when he reached his peg, so that all might share alike. The custom of pegging tankards is said to have been instituted by St. Dunstan in order to place some check on the amount that was drunk and thus obviate brawling.—London Globe.
