Troubles of an Amateur.
"I thought you had gone to raising bees," said the man from the city. "I don't see any sign of them around here."
"I had half a dozen colonies of the finest bees I could get," answered the suburbanite, "and a whole library on bee raising, but they swarmed one day, and while I was looking through my books to find out what was the proper thing to do when bees swarmed the blamed things flew away, and I've never seen 'em since."—Chicago Tribune.

Grant's Sense of Humor.
General Grant had a keen sense of humor and often expressed it effectively. He once said of his standing at West Point that his only chance of getting anywhere near the head of his class was to turn the class wrong end foremost.

Another remark that is credited to him concerned his lack of musical talent. He said that he never could whistle more than two tunes, that one was "Yankee Doodle" and the other was not, and that he was never sure which tune he was whistling.—Youth's Companion.

The Ghost and the Meat.
We have all heard of the French schoolboy who, asked to translate into English the French of "To be or not to be," evolved this, "To was or not to am."

Another schoolboy has equaled this translation, according to the London Chronicle, in recovering from German the text, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." The ghost, of course, is ready, but the meat is feeble.

The Cut and Dried Life.

We are born into a world that is an inexhaustible store of ready-made ideas, stored up in tradition, in books and in every medium of communication between our minds and others. All we have to do is to accept this predigested nourishment and ask no questions. We could live a whole life without ever making a really individual response, without providing ourselves, out of our own experience, with any of the material that our minds work on. Many of us seem to be just this kind of spiritual parasites.—Atlantic Monthly.

Deceived by the Title.

In the titles of books lie at times pitfalls for the unwary. An almost classic example was afforded by John Ruskin when in 1851 he wrote a short pamphlet on the text, "There shall be one fold and one shepherd." This, which treated of the reunion of the Protestant churches, was published as "Notes on the Construction of Sheep-folds"—a title which, appealing rather to the agricultural than to the clerical mind, insured a brisk circulation among farmers.

Newton's Apple Tree.

It is impossible to say at this late day how true or how false is the old story about Newton's apple tree at Woolsthorpe, from which he is supposed to have seen the fall of the apple which gave him his first thought of the attraction of gravity. Voltaire is the authority for the well-known story. He claims that the story was told to him by Catherine Barton, Newton's niece. How much truth there may be in the tale will never be known, but it seems to be certain that tradition marked a tree as that from which the famous apple fell in 1620, when, owing to decay, the tree was cut down.—New York American.

Too Difficult a Job.

An Irishman who was too old for active work was offered the position of crossing tender at a small railroad station. He looked dubious as the duties of the office were explained to him and the meaning of the various flags was clearly stated.
"In case of danger with a train coming of course you wave the red flag," said his friend, proceeding with his explanation. A hard old hand grasped his arm.

"Man, dear, it'll never do," said Patrick, shaking his head solemnly. "I could never trust meself to remember to wave a red flag when there was a green wan handy."—Current Literature.

English Triumphant.

One of the reasons why English is expected to become a world language is that English people refuse to learn another. A correspondent sends the following example: At Muscat, at the entrance to the Persian gulf, there lived for many years an Englishman, supposed to be the only, or almost the only, British resident on the 1,500 miles of Arabian coastline from Aden to Kuwait. It would seem that he could hardly have escaped knowing Arabic. Yet he confessed that he could not speak a dozen words of that language.
"But how do you carry on your trade?" some one asked.
"Oh," he replied, "the beggars have to learn English."—London Globe.

Identified Himself.

The great tenor Mario once had to give a free exhibition of his magnificent vocal power in court in order to gain freedom for himself. He had been arrested in Madrid in mistake for a mischievous political agitator and in vain proclaimed his identity to the powers that be. Finally he was told that if he really was the famous singer his voice was a certain means of convincing the court of the truth of his claim. For seven or eight minutes Mario held all within hearing spellbound, and he was then allowed to take his departure, with profuse apologies for his arrest and detention.

Not What He Expected.

"Darling," he murmured, "whatever induced you to care for a fellow like me?"
"I really don't know, George," she replied. "Pa has threatened to send me to a brain specialist."—Boston Transcript.

Old Time Vintners.

In the city of London at the time of King John every vintner was required to hang outside his shop an iron vessel with pegs marking the different quantities sold.

Easy Prediction.

"I have often predicted that my wife's hair would be nice and curly at night," said the clever one. "How did I know? Why, I saw it in the morning papers."

Every man has a right to judge one individual only, and that is himself.
