Notice to Advertisers

Several of our advertisers have asked for special rates on local advertising, and as we wish to be fair with all of them, and not show one more favors than another, we have adopted the following rates for readers to go among the local news:

Less than 100 lines per month, 5c per line; over 100 lines and less than 200, 4c per line. Special rates given on over 200 lines per month.

The editor sat in his office whence all but him had fled and he wished that every last dead beat was in his grave—stone dead. His mind then wandered far away to the time when he should die; and his royal editorial soul go scotching to the sky; when he'd roam the fields of paradise and sail o'er Jasper seas and all things glorious would combine his every sense to please. He thought how then he'd look across the great gulf dark and drear, that'll yawn between his happy soul and those who swindled here and when for water they would call and in agony they'd caper, he'd shout to them: "Just quench your thirst with the due that's on your paper."

It is not generally known, but nevertheless a fact, that there are people still living who can remember the time when tomatoes were raised merely for their beauty as we now raise roses, while its beauty was admired it was considered like the poisonous oak, dangerous to even handle except by dark complected persons. Years of acquaintance-ship however wore off its superstition and a few fool-hardy actually owned up to have tasted the fruit. From this small beginning has gradually grown a use that makes today an industry with a combined capital of over thirty millions of dollars, which disburses millions of dollars to its employes each year and aggregates an output of two hundred and forty million cans.

Will a merchant who is wise ever cease to advertise? Yes—when the trees grow upside down; when the beggar wears a crown; when ice forms on the sun; when the sparrow weighs a ton; when gold dollars get too cheap; when womens secrets keep; when fish forget to swim; when Satan sings a hymn; when girls go back on gum; when a small boy hates a drum; when no politician schemes; when mince pie makes pleasant dreams; when its fun to break a tooth; when all lawyers tell the truth; when cold water makes you drunk; when you love to smell a skunk; when the drummer has no brass; when all these things come to pass; then man that's wise will neglect to advertise.

SYNOPSIS

Ebenezer Goodly is expecting a visit from his brother in Australia, the Bishop of Ballarat. Great preparations are being made in the Goodly home in anticipation of this visit. Ebenezer Goodly, in an unguarded moment, is coaxed by his prospective son-in-law into secretly attending with him a prize-fight. After the prize-fight, through a complication of circumstances Jones, a commercial traveler, finds his way into Goodly's house and pretends for the rest of the evening that he's the Bishop of Ballarat. The real Bishop arrives and the matter is cleared up at the close.

Dangers of Riches.

More men have been ruined by affluence and its consequent temptations than have ever been wrecked on the rock of poverty. To the rich man duty often loses its imperative voice, and he tampers with its claims and neglects its fulfillment, while all the time he is breeding greed and selfishness in his heart, to the defilement of his whole life. Against all this and much more the man of relative poverty is defended and kept.—Strand Magazine.

Flattered.

Editor (to Miss Oldgirl, aged about forty)—Your work shows promise, but do you know, madam, good literary work is seldom done by a woman until she is thirty or thirty-five? Several years hence you will be able to write acceptable articles.

Miss Oldgirl (as she leaves)—That was the most delightful man I ever met.

Kind Actions.

Each solitary kind action that is done the whole world over is working briskly in its own sphere to restore the balance between right and wrong. Perhaps an act of kindness never dies, but extends the invisible undulations of its influence over the breadth of centuries.
